Famous Conductors Figure Prominently on Ravinia Lists

A resume of the Spring musical activities of the distinguished guest conductors and soloists to appear during the Ravinia festival this summer encompasses the outstanding music of the major cities of England, the Continent and North America, including Canada and Mexico.

Internationally famous conductors who figure prominently on the Ravinia lists are busily engaged in pre-season engagements or resting in preparation for a summer of further activity in various musical centers.

A brief glance reveals that Sir Ernest MacMillan, the distinguished conductor of the Toronto symphony orchestra, who is to direct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in the first week's concert of the Ravinia festival, is engaged on an extensive lecture tour throughout Canada.

Jose Iturbi, famous Spanish pianist-conductor, who is to appear as piano soloist on each of Sir Ernest's programs, has just finished a tour with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra during which he appeared both as pianist and conductor, and is busied with plans for the Robin Hood Dell series in Philadelphia, one of the oldest summer music series in the country.

Ernest Ansermet, the popular Swiss conductor who won so many warm friends in Ravinia last season covers an immense amount of territory during his musical season. Aside from his regular series in Geneva Switzerland, he has this spring conducted seasons in Stockholm, Oslo and London, and following his engagement for the second week at Ravinia, he is to direct the summer season in Mexico City.

Following through the list, one finds Hans Kindler, the Dutch-born cellist conductor who founded the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C. in 1931, and has remained its conductor ever since, at present on tour in Europe directing concerts in Paris, Holland and Belgium. Returning in time for his Ravinia dates in July. He will end his summer season at the Hollywood Bowl.

Violin soloist, Mischa Mischakoff, to appear in his Chicago farewell on the July 17th program with Mr. Kindler, is closing his teaching year before leaving for his regular summer's work at Chataugua, following which he joins the ranks of the great N.B.C. Toscanini Orchestra in the fall, resigning his post as concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra to do so.

Hans Lange's strenuous season as associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra entailing an unusual amount of work owing to Dr. Stock's illness, terminated with the Evanston festival, and Mr. Lange is enjoying a well-deserved rest in Estes Park, Colorado, before returning to Ravinia the latter part of July. Mr. Lange will later conduct a series of Symphonietta concerts in St. Louis.

Paris also claims Vladimir Golschmann, the brilliant young conductor of the St. Louis Orchestra whose concerts Golschmann have long been known in Paris. His Ravinia engagement is the fifth week of the festival.

Probably the most internationally known of the festival conductors is Fritz Reiner, who has led the greatest orchestras of the world and is equally in demand for opera and symphony concert. This versatility has led him to London to the Covent Garden this spring to conduct Wagner's "Parsifal," "Tristan and Isolde," and "The Flying Dutchman," to great acclaim, and preceding the Ravinia season will return him to the Lewisohn stadium in New York to direct the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in a miniature Wagner cycle. Mr. Reiner will conduct the final week of the Ravinia festival.

No less busy are the operatic contingent who make up the opening night artists of the gala operatic program. Conductor Gennaro Papi, tenor, Mario Chamlee and basso Leon Rother have spent a busy winter and spring in the two seasons of the Metropolitan opera in New York. The successful revival of "Marouf" in English featuring Chamlee was the greatest success of the spring season. "Marouf" was one of the popular items in the repertoire of the Ravinia Opera company.

Lucrezia Bori, the beloved of Ravinia and the Metropolitan retired from the operatic field last year, and is emerging from her retirement only to sing at Ravinia at the opening concert in honor of Louis Eckstein, and for a very few festival and radio engagements.

Sir Ernest MacMillan's opening symphonic program is here appended:

Saturday Is Most Dangerous Day of Week for Driving

Death reaps her heaviest toll among motorists in the twilight hours between seven and eight p.m., but accidents are more frequent from five to six p.m., Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes pointed out in a safety bulletin issued here today.

Secretary Hughes said a recent survey disclosed that 8.6 percent of all motor vehicle fatalities recorded in the nation last year occurred between the hours of seven and eight in the evening. He said that accidents occurring at this hour numbered 63,990.

During the hours from five to six p.m., according to the survey, an even larger number of accidents were reported but the death rate was not as high. A total of 66,590 accidents were recorded and 7.7 percent of them proved fatal.

The most dangerous day of the week to be driving is Saturday, but Sunday driving is almost as hazardous, declared Secretary Hughes.

Of the 864,800 motor vehicle accidents recorded last year 18.6 percent occurred on Saturday, Secretary Hughes stated. Sunday's contribution was 17.3 percent of the total accidents.

"Tuesday is the 'safest' day to be driving," says Mr. Hughes. "Last year only 11.8 percent of motor vehicle accidents occurred on Tuesday."

"During these more dangerous periods of the day and while motoring week-ends, drivers should be constantly alert to avoid collisions."

Motorists were urged not to wait until darkness to turn on their lights. Many persons have been killed and injured because of this careless habit of some motorists.
