For Community Service

In this community the value and service of the Community Service are outstanding. For many years this unselfish and worthwhile activity has been carried on a unifying, progressive force in the city. As proof of its value it has grown in influence and resource until it is in possession of $67,000 and sufficient public support to make it seem wise to expand its activity and become of wider and more general service.

To this end there has been discussed for some time the advisability of establishing a center, a building which would become the physical symbol of Community Service and the basis of further and wider activity. That such a building is desirable is unquestioned — it would provide a focal point for group activity, a physical lo-social affairs, civic movements. It would give added body and weight to civic pride, to the feeling that Highland Park is a good place in which to live.

The way for this expansion has become evident in the proposal to buy the property and structure of the Christian Science Church. To this transaction the membership of the Church has agreed. The management of Community Service is also favorable and has placed a deposit on the property, contingent on the approval of the zoning board of Highland Park.

The snag in the path of this worthwhile enterprise now arises from the objection of some of the residents of nearby property, who base their claim on the violation of the zoning ordinance created by this act and on the lessening of property values caused by having a center of this kind nearby.

In the interests of the whole community their objections should be overcome. The location is ideal for Community Service — joined with the City Hall, library, and Y. W. C. A., the building would form a civic group, center of the community life of the town.

The disturbance it would create would be little, if any, more than that caused by the regular routine of the present Church group arriving and departing for services, meetings and regular business.

The building itself is adaptable, with little alteration to the needs of Community Service. Game rooms, hall, committee rooms, all could be arranged at small expense. If this property were retained by the present owners, the building in due course would be razed to make way for a new church. Under the proposed arrangement, the church will build nearby, worthy Community Service will be in possession of a usable building for approximately the price of the land alone.

Community Service means much to Highland Park. The citizens of Highland Park should therefore support and further its work even at the expense of disapproval from a small portion of the citizenry.

and prepare week's in advance for this outstanding sale. The merchandise they offer is right from their regular stock, as well as broken lines, and are standard brands. Through their desire to serve, the local merchants gain the confidence of their customers, who have learned by experience, that it pays to "trade at home."

With the high cost of living it is also an excellent opportunity to replenish the larder at a saving. Canned goods won't spoil and it will taste mighty good after our fresh fruit and vegetable season wanes.

Perhaps your household furnishings need retouching with a little added color, or you need curtains, drapes, bedding or other home equipment. This is a splendid opportunity to replace or renew these articles.

These and numerous others are all offered by your local merchants, who are here to serve you, fifty-two weeks in a year. Show them your eagerness to help them by patronizing their stores on Dollar Day.

Reduce Size of Certificate of Title in State

A reduction in the size of the motor vehicle certificate of title was announced recently by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes. The new size measures 7½x6½ inches in comparison with 8½x7½ inches of the former copy.

The change makes for greater convenience to motorists and will effect a saving on paper costs to the state. Approximately 2,000 rolls of paper are used during a year in making certificate of title copies.

In announcing the new size Secretary Hughes called attention to the necessity for the applicant to keep the required information within the designated boxes on the application form and avoid running over into the margin on the right hand side. When figures are run into the margins the department must make corrections, in order to assure correct copy, thereby causing delay in issuance.
