MOSAIC MURAL

Over 80,000 pieces of various colored glass were used in the making of a mosaic mural just above the stage in the Deerfield Grammar School gymnasium. The artist, John Steffan, who made this picture, is now doing similar work at the University of Illinois.

An indented part of the wall, 4 1/2 feet by 22 1/2 feet, has been used for this surface decoration made by inlaying small bits of colored pieces of glass to depict a forest and a group of reindeer. The selection of deer was quite appropriate for Deerfield.

Principal Carl E. Bates states that the artist explained that these mosaics are common in Europe, but few are found in the United States. He also stated that the artist did not like to have the picture termed "mural," but as the dictionary describes a mural as being "on, in, or against a wall," this unusual mosaic is best depicted as a mosaic mural.
