

Peyraud's Works Given Recognition In Chicago Gallery

In Sunday's edition of the Herald and Examiner, the following article appeared, giving recognition to Frank C. Peyraud, noted landscape artist, who for many years has made his home in Ravinia. The Peyraud's reside at 1250 Judson avenue.

A prophet is not without honor save in his own country. Art-minded Chicagoans, however, are beginning to discover that they have a prophet in their midst. He is that veteran landscape painter, Frank C. Peyraud.

If Mr. Peyraud has lacked due recognition until recently it is because he has submerged himself in his pupils. For many years he has been content to express himself through their achievements, and he has launched many a promising painter on the road to success.

In his own right, Mr. Peyraud is best known as the interpreter of the Skokie marshes, whose primitive beauty is fast disappearing under melonation projects. His were few.

But today, in the sunset of his life, he has at last come into his own. As if making up for lost time, he is producing landscapes that will live. A collection of his most recent paintings is on view at the O'Brien galleries in Chicago.

Cloud Effects Fine

His cloud effects are the best since Innes. The Skokie landscape, with its flatness and sparse foliage, lends itself par excellence to sublime sky and cloud effects which the brush of Peyraud records in all their glory. He, as no other artist has done, has captured the intense blue of the Illinois autumnal skies, and against this background has thrown the scarlet and gold banners of the trees. His trees sway in the wind. They are alive. Their riot of October pageantry stands out against the sky's deep blue and the sweep of drifting, fleecy clouds.

Thus, his "Indian Summer" reveals a beautifully balanced pattern of trees, their delicate branches spreading out, the leaves running a chromatic scale of coloring from palest gold to deepest bronze. Blue hills loom up in the distance. Under soft lights the picture fairly sings.

His "Midsummer Night" is viewed from a bower of deep green trees, the foliage silvered by the moonlight. Clouds race overhead partly shrouding the moon, but not dimming its radiance. Gorgeous maples on a rocky New England pasture are set off against the distant hills and sky of his "October in Vermont."

Oyster-gray and gold frames—an innovation in the framing of oils—enhance the beauty of the pictures.

Police said the collision occurred when a car driven by W. E. Huston, 928 N. St. Johns avenue, turned into First street as Paneralli was motoring north on Green Bay road. Paneralli and his daughter were treated at the Highland Park hospital for cuts and abrasions.

Proper Methods Are Guarantee for Good Pies

Blue-ribbon pie bakers of Lake county are to have their laurels challenged in the near future by home bureau members of the county, as the result of a thorough study on the baking of pies and pastries, now being started.

Miss Grace Armstrong, extension specialist in nutrition, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, spent Friday in the county with local leaders who will give the information on pies and pastries to local units.

Among first pointers given by Miss Armstrong was the fact that the filling for the pie determines whether the crust is pre-baked or whether the crust and filling are baked at the same time, also the temperature and length of baking period. Most pastry troubles come from too much handling of ingredients and the wrong oven temperature, said Miss Armstrong.

Homemakers who find the ordinary pastry crust hard to make may be tempted to try the graham cracker crust, suggested Miss Armstrong, since it requires a small amount of effort and not baking. In her demonstration on pies and

2 In spite of the magnitude of the damage, the work of restoring telephone service proceeded swiftly and smoothly because the Illinois Bell Telephone Company is set up to meet just such emergencies. It has not only its own personnel and resources to call upon, but those of the entire Bell System, if necessary, and the service of the Western Electric Company, which keeps emergency supplies at strategic points throughout the country.

3 It is the preparation for these emergencies, from the advance planning by management to carrying out the last detail by every individual in the group, which makes possible the quick restoration of communication when Nature goes on a rampage. This working together of all units of a universal telephone system makes possible the efficient and dependable telephone service you know today.

When Nature goes on a Rampage

1 The telephone company is always prepared for emergencies. No one knows when Nature will crash down on our plant. It did this in January a year ago when a sleet storm, the worst in years, covered west central Illinois. Trees toppled to the ground, blocking highways already perilous to travel. Poles snapped, dragging down wires encased in sleet an inch and a half thick.
