SKY PILOTS

This is that month again when the lion roars mightily and the lamb bleats softly. But to Johnny and the gang March means more than that. It's the time to get out the glue-pot and shears, the wooden staves, big, silky sheets of paper, red, blue and yellow, a ball of strong twine, and start hustling to make himself a whopping kite with its wildly twisting tail knotted with gay bunting. Remember what fun that was? You were skipper, helmsman, and chief mate all in one, when you hiked up a wind-buffeted hill-and sent your own hand-made creation rocketing aloft and proudly piloted it through the skies. March's young sky pilots will soon be taking to the windy fields and hills again!

NOW HERE IN HAINOIS-!

It pays a state to advertise!

Almost 270 years ago the first words publicizing the "most temperate clime" of Florida appeared in a London advertising pamphlet. Under the heading, "A Brief Description of the Coasts of Florida," this first example of state advertising told of "the many sorts of fruit trees" and "the two crops of Indian Cat Shoppe was robbed by an armcorn in one year" to be found in the new Utopia.

The development of Florida from an uninhabited peninsula . . . Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Reeder to a leading resort has been marked by 270 years of state boosting. Since those first inquisitive humans sailed across the Atlantic in 1669 to see for themselves the "two crops of Indian corn," millons have listened to the call of Florida as told in

It pays a state to advertise! Illinois has wonders worth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. shouting from the roof tops, charms ripe to be caught in poetic Cashmore of Deerfield, and Roy phrases, excitements waiting for a click of candid cameras. Now here in Illinois, we've the pulsing beat of great industries, the quiet and historic beauty of the Lincoln country, the flowing majesty of the Great Mississippi. Now here in Illinoisbut it would take a heap of telling to tell all about Illinois. It pays a state to advertise! Let's advertise Illinois!

Early Settlers Avoided Prairies

Early settlers in Illinois generally avoided the open grass land of the Prairies, research workers of the Federal Writers' Project, W.P.A., have learned, under the impression that the prairie was unhealthful. This seems to have been one of several factors that confined most of the first settlements to the wooded areas, adjunct to streams. The timber provided logs for the cabins and rails for fences. It was also the source of fuel for the fire places, and of the game which was the most important item to be cooked there The leaf mould of clearings in the timber was much easier to cultivate than the tough sod of the prairie. By 1840, however, the open land was no longer avoided.
