Little Chats About Your Health

A GOOD PRESCRIPTION, CENTURIES OLD

As early as the time of Caesar the Druids recommended four rules of conduct which are now, more than ever, approved by physicians.

They are cheerfulness, temperance, exercise and early rising.

Add to these the precaution of yearly health examinations and the policy of calling your doctor as soon as an ill threatens and serious health problems should be few and far between.

Think of us as the physician's first assistant whenever prescriptions are to be filled.

High School "Stunts" Pleases Capacity Audience Saturday

The twelfth annual Student Stunts, sponsored by the high school P.T.A., lived up to its reputation Saturday night when it pleased a capacity audience of over 1700 people in the school auditorium. All seats for the performance were gone a half hour before the opening curtain so that many who wished to, were unable to see the show.

The sixteen acts of Stunts were staged with unusual precision so that this year's production was especially popular with its audience. Students were quick to pronounce Bud and Shirley Pfister's dancing of the "Big Apple" the high point of the evening. More conservative Stunts-goers picked the Lundin-Hoffman piano team or Dannie Cobb's rousing "I Love Life". Everybody was quick to praise the tumbling teams and dance combinations, and favorable criticism could be found for each act and every contributing organization.

Miss Elyse Rinkenberger directed Stunts for the eighth successive year. She was assisted by Phyllis Udell and Myra Bevins. Germaine Walsh, Betty Bowen, Aldie Harris and Gunter Schwandt headed other production committees.
