A DOG'S LIFE

By Dr. Jim Butterworth

Well, Patsy Noyes' mother called me up about a week ago and said I had better come up to Lake Forest to see Patsy, because Patsy looked awfully worried about something, mostly because she was thinking about the family she was supposed to have sometime during the week. Patsy is a real nice Springer Spaniel, and all liver and white colored, with a lot of freckles on her nose and chin, and, as are most Springer Spaniels called Patsy, she has been my special friend. Dundee Noyes, Patsy's Scotch Terrier sister, also met me at the door when I went up to see them, and barked a doggy welcome as I entered the house. Dundee wasn't very worried about anything in particular, though her babies were supposed to come at about the same time as Patsy's. Anyway, both Dundee and Patsy finally decided they had better come home with me where it was cool, quiet and comfortable, and where they would have a chance to renew their acquaintances with Blondie, the Cocker Spaniel, Yukon, the Malamute, and Barbara, the Scotch Terrier, so it wasn't long before we had jumped in the car and had whizzed back home.

Anyway, we didn't do much at all for the next couple of days excepting talk and gossip with all the other people and dogs. Patsy was real glad to see Charlie, whom she had met the last time she was here, and who took special pains to see that she got a little extra supper or the extra bone, while Dundee became very much interested in Marty, whom she had never seen before. Marty is my new helper, who likes all Scotch Terriers, particularly Scotch Terriers named Dundee, a fact that Dundee appreciated very much. I was telling Dundee just this morning that it's too bad that Marty has a girl in Waukegan, because it doesn't look as if she (Dundee) has much of a chance for any permanent affection.

Everybody had just about forgotten that anyone was going to have any babies, that is, everyone except Patsy and Dundee, and Blondie and Barbara and Taffy Meyerhoff, who also are expecting families. Then one night about a couple of nights ago Patsy barked for me to hurry up and get a taxi and a doctor and take her to the hospital, because she just knew that it wouldn't be long from then, all the while forgetting in the excitement, that she didn't need a taxi because she was already at the hospital, and she didn't need a doctor because I was already there, holding her paw and trying to tell her not to be afraid, and things like that. She had probably been reading Esquire. Just about that time I heard a lot of noise outside in the corridor and remembered that Salty Cole, who is a Springer Spaniel, just like Patsy, was out there, pacing around in a terrible stew and at an awful rate. I took a few minutes off to go out and tell him the old story about never having lost a father, and then came back to Patsy, who was getting worried and worried. Well, to make a long story short, when we finally made her comfortable for the rest of the night, what was left of it, Patsy had had seven blessed events all rolled up in one, and there were seven new babies, four just like

Patsy, and three just like Salty, which didn't please Salty any too much, but nevertheless he was happy that everything had turned out alright. Patsy sort of laughed at Dundee because she had been telling her all the time that her family would be fat, but Dundee didn't care very much at all. I almost forgot to tell you that Barbara had her family the next night, but there was only one baby when we got all through, instead of seven, which aggravated Barbara very much, inasmuch as she wanted at least as many as Patsy. But now we are all holding our fingers crossed because there is still Dundee and Blondie and Taffy left, and they are getting very anxious.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES

One of the most fundamental and basic principles of a Democracy is that a people participate in the governing of themselves, which, in turn, calls for an emphasis upon HOME RULE or Local Government: not a centralization of government and authority into a Bureaucracy. Generally speaking, the more centralized a government, either a Bureaucracy or Dictatorship, the more ignorant, illiterate, and uninformed the population. It is with a definite antagonism toward the trend to Centralization of Government, and with a sincere and earnest desire that HOME RULE should prevail that I make my Declaration of Principles regarding the following basic and controversial subjects effected by legislation:

Taxation:

I am opposed to the unjust Sales Tax.

I favor a reduction in all forms of other taxation. This can be accomplished by drastic reduction in cost of government.

Reduction of Auto License Fees.

Labor:

As your representative I shall at all times be interested in any legislation proposed and presented by authentic, nationally recognized, and substantial representatives of labor, and at no time will I have any consideration for any outside influences that are not AMERICAN!

I favor collective bargaining; the abolishment of Child Labor; Unemployment Insurance; and Compulsory employment of capable men 45 years of age and over.

Industry and Business:

Reduce governmental interference. Allow business to operate with as little governmental interference as possible. Take the Government out of business and put some semblance of business in the Government.

Agriculture:

Opposed to any program of scarcity.

Interested in Dairy Farmers of Illinois and the marketing of their products. I am especially interested in our dairy farmers. The flow of milk from other States has done much to demoralize our own producers. Such measures should be adopted that would assure Illinois Farmers a market for all the milk they now produce.

Revision of inspection practices on a Chicago-State cooperative basis.

Education:

I am favorable to a State Board of Education, which shall act only in an advisory capacity, and be without executive powers.

I am favorable to the Illinois State Teachers Program.

Relief:

Local administration of relief without political domination. Old Age Assistance without pauperizing those eligible to receive its benefits.
