

Local Dealer Says Modern Kitchen Aids Nation's Health

"One important factor in the health of the nation—cleanliness and sanitation in the kitchen—is a great deal easier to have today as a result of modern electrical appliances," says Mr. Prior of the Iredale Company, Kelvinator dealer here. "The burden of keeping America's kitchen clean," Mr. Prior declares, "is being lifted from the shoulders of the housewife and banished by designers of kitchen equipment."

"One place where this is particularly evident today is in the new line of Kelvinator electrical appliances," Mr. Prior points out. "Every product and model has outstanding features to aid the housewife in her cleaning duties."

"Lifetime porcelain or Permalux, that does not stain and is easy to wash, stand out in the new 1938 Kelvinator refrigerators," Mr. Prior declares. "The metal inside the cabinet is stainless and will not rust, while the interiors are so lighted that no possible dirt can remain invisible. In addition, the inside corners are rounded and the shelves slide out easily, making cleaning the interior a veritable pleasure."

"Other Kelvinator kitchen products, the electric range and the water heater, are also constructed with an eye to kitchen cleanliness," Mr. Prior states. "The smooth, clean top of the electric range, free from dirt-catching obstructions, is particularly valuable in this respect. Both the electric range and the water heater do away with the smoke and soot that an open flame would cause, making the kitchen air completely free from this form of uncleanness."

Other factors in the modern kitchen contribute to cleanliness and sanitation, Mr. Prior declares. Seamless floor coverings turn up where they meet the walls preventing dirt from hiding in cracks and crevices. The walls themselves are often surfaced so that only a damp cloth is necessary to keep them free of smudges and stains.

Sheridan Rifle Club Observes Its Fifth Anniversary

The Sheridan Rifle and Pistol club commemorated its 5th anniversary on Wednesday, April 6, with a dinner at the Green Tea Pot in Highland Park.

The occasion was marked by a resume of the past activity and accomplishment of the club, presented by Joseph Cameron, a former president and one of the older members in point of service. Edwin Cole, the president, spoke briefly of the present and rather comprehensive future plans of the organization.

The principal speaker, Major Francis W. Parker, who is a national figure in the shooting world, detailed some of the pressing problems facing the future of the Sheridan club and organized shooters generally. His long standing connection with the National Rifle association as a ranking official and as a director permitted him to detail the great work of the association.

Major Parker, an honorary member of the Sheridan club and a resident of Highland Park, was in charge of the small bore activity of the National Matches at Camp

Perry in 1937. As executive officer he directed the U. S. Grant Memorial Matches last summer and the University of Chicago Invitational Rifle Match of two weeks ago. He was able to supply interesting and detailed information concerning these matches past and future.

Subsequent to its next director's meeting, the Sheridan club expects to announce future activities that should prove of interest to the entire community.
