FOLLOW THAT SALES LETTER

WITH A TELEPHONE CALL

TO CLOSE THE ORDER!

HERE is a plan used with marked success by many sales executives.

First they send a letter giving quotations or other information. They know the approximate time this should arrive at the customer's office. They telephone while the letter is still on his desk, and the subject fresh in his mind. Immediate orders have resulted from an unusually high percentage of such calls.

Telephoning shows the customer that you are interested in his order. It allows you to answer any questions that may have arisen in his mind, and discuss the matter further if necessary. It means swift service in filling the order . . . always an asset in getting new orders in the future.
