Pioneer Caravan Opens First State Pageant in Waukegan

When the Pioneer Caravan of the Northwest Territory celebration presents its pageant "Freedom on the March" in Waukegan Thursday, July 7, it will mark their last appearance in Illinois until late in August. The boys will arrive in Waukegan from St. Charles at about 11 a.m.

At 7 p.m. a gigantic parade will begin in the business district of Waukegan and march to Weiss park, the site of the pageant. The parade will include floats from many nearby towns as well as military units from Great Lakes Naval Training base and Fort Sheridan. The performance of the pageant, which is free of charge, will begin at 8:45.

Over 65 Waukegan organizations are participating in plans for welcoming the caravan, under the leadership of Major Joseph A. Teece, chairman, and Mrs. Helen Heckinger, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, co-chairman. It is expected that the celebration in Waukegan will be one of the finest in the state.

The caravan has been in Illinois since its arrival in Danville May 26 and will have played 36 performances in the state by the time it arrives in Waukegan. The pageant "Freedom on the March," which is part of the Northwest Territory Sesquicentennial celebration, depicts events in American history leading up to the official settlement of the Northwest Territory, of which Illinois was once a part.

Brilliant Gathering To Greet Rodzinski

Charles S. Dewey, Jr., Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLennan, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Jelke, Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Kemper, Mr. Herman Waldeck, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson, Mr. Charles H. Schweppe, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Poole, Mr. Durand Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Pope, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell.

Hundreds of others are expected to enjoy the free benches and listen to the symphony under the stars from lawns and walks of lovely Ravinia.

From Manager Arthur Lowrie at Ravinia Park comes the report that work on walks, lawns, flower beds and the newly decorated orchestra shell has been completed and with the cooperation of the weather man (who prognosticates a warm and dry July) all is in readiness to greet the distinguished guest conductor who opens the season, Dr. Rodzinski.

Second only to their enjoyment of the fine music to be heard, Ravinia patrons take pride in the beautiful surroundings of the park, where informality reigns, and baseball and picnics precede the evening concerts and those who prefer the lawns and the wooded walks to the pavilion or the many outside seats provided for them to the covered pavilion, come with rugs and shawls over their arms.

The refreshment hall is a popular intermission rendezvous and in the capable hands of Mrs. Green of the Green Tea Pot good service of light refreshments is assured. The phlox surrounded fountain draws many who like the slightly iron-tinged water of the natural bubbly fountain nearby, until the warning trumpet sounds the call of more starlit symphony.

Acoustically perfect, all points of listening at Ravinia are points of vantage, and early departing or late arriving guests can hear beautifully from the very gates of entrance.

The lovers of symphony music, the first week's programs prepared by the famous Polish-American conductor Rodzinski for his first appearance at the Ravinia Festival are full of interest.

The opening program starts nobly with the favorite of the three overtures written by Beethoven for the opera "Leonore,"—the third, and is followed no less nobly by the familiar Symphony No. 1 by Brahms, the slow movement played in memory of Willoughby G. Walling, chairman of the Ravinia Festival in 1936, 1937. Following the intermission comes the first novelty of the season, the Passacaglia and Fugue commissioned by the Festival Association from the talented young composer Gardner Read, who after hearing his work performed will depart on a six weeks Cromwell scholarship to Munich. Closing the program is the beautiful "Daphnis and Chloe," (second suite) by the late Maurice Ravel.

An all Russian program the second night of the season will find Rodzinski on familiar ground, and the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon programs are designed to show all facts of the art of our illustrious guest.

During the opening concert Mr. Percy B. Eckhart, who with Mrs. Eckhart has returned from a European trip in time to take over his position as chairman of the Festival Association, following his former friend and associate, Willoughby G. Walling, will say a few words of welcome to speed the 1938 Festival on its way.

Special features arranged for the Ravinia Festival during the summer announced by the Ravinia Festival to date include: the engagement of the talented Chicago pianist, Gitta Gradova, who will play the Rachmaninoff second Concerto the evening of July 23rd, under the direction of Eugene Goossens; and Mozart's Concerto for Flute and Harp to be played by Ernest Liegl and Joseph Vito, brilliant first Flutist and harpist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The commissioned works for first performance: the first, "Passacaglia and Fugue," by Gardner Read performed the first night of the season under Artur Rodzinski; the second, Suite d'Orchestre by David Van Vacter, whose fame as a composer is equalled by that of flutist with the orchestra; and "Fantasia" by the distinguished composer-pedagogue of the Northwestern University Music School, Arne Oldberg. The latter two works are slated for performances during the third and fourth weeks of the season.

Other soloists and special features will be announced.
