Illinois Women Organize To Fight Hidden Taxes

A new consumer movement among women to combat "taxes" that increase the cost of living was moving ahead in the state of Illinois today.

The movement entered in Peoria where a unit of the National Consumers Tax Commission a non-profit and non-partisan consumer organization with headquarters in Chicago, was forming.

Mrs. Victor C. Reynolds, past president of the American Legion Auxiliary, is chairman of the Peoria unit.

As plans went forward there, Mrs. Reynolds called upon consumers throughout the state to join in "the crusade to protect our family budgets" from taxes that undermine them.

"Studies show that taxes—two-thirds of them hidden to the consumer who pays them—absorb more than 25 cents from the earned dollar of income of everyone in the country," Mrs. Reynolds said.

"These hidden taxes are passed on to the consumer as part of the purchase prices of everything we buy. They increase the prices of our food, our clothing, our transportation, our housing.

"They make our consumer dollars bring us either less quantity or poorer quality.

"It is time we consumers united to stop these unseen taxes on purses and pocketbooks. We must bring taxes into the open so that we all know what we are paying and when we are paying them."

In addition to the Peoria group, women in other communities in Illinois are becoming interested in the movement and have made plans to set up units, Mrs. Reynolds said.

Similar units also are forming in Ohio, Minnesota, Michigan and other states, she said.

Each group in the various communities will enroll members and conduct tax studies in the effort to make their neighbors tax-conscious and to stop "this increasing hidden tax threat to our standard of living," she said.

COOK AND KEEP COOL

... with a Modern Electric Range

FAST! CLEAN! ECONOMICAL!

... and Gives You
Delicious Meals Every Time!

■ Cook all summer long—to give your family the delicious, nourishing meals they enjoy most. But why not guard your health and appearance on sweltering days against the heat given off from an old-fashioned range? It's so easy to have a cool kitchen like thousands of other housewives, when you do your cooking on a Modern Electric Range.

Your Modern Electric Range cuts down kitchen temperatures these 3 important ways:

1. Heavily-insulated oven holds heat in the oven—out of the kitchen.
2. Coils concentrate heat under the utensil—it is absorbed by the contents—a minimum escapes into the air.
3. Electric cooking is faster—shorter cooking time keeps the kitchen cooler.

And remember, a Modern Electric Range brings you every other cooking advantage; cleanliness, because a "going over" the porcelain enamel brings back the sparkling luster of white surfaces; cooking successes every time—modern cooking controls make failures almost unknown; economy, because of low electric rates.

See the beautiful, sturdy new electric ranges. Remember the special bargains in new 1937 ranges. Make hot-weather days comfortable. ... Come in today and select the Modern Electric Range that meets your requirements—that suits your budget.
