A LESSON FOR ALL THE WORLD

Recently the civilized world has emerged from the black shadow of a great Fear.

It was the fear of war-a war which could have plunged both men and nations into new and terrible agonies of body and of spirit.

From this immediate threat they have, as this is written, been released-perhaps with a sense of grateful wonder at the deliverance.

What has the ordeal taught them?

No one can say. But many will hope that as a result of the experience, both nations and their leaders may look more searchingly into the motives and actions which led them so close to the brink of catastrophe.

Many will hope that out of it may develop a different idea of statesmanship than that which, in recent years, has been tolerated by so much of the world.

They will hope for a cessation of attempts to unleash the twin demons of passion and hatred. They will hope for surcease from the vast and ugly chorus of disparagement which has crowded the air-waves; from efforts to keep whole populaces in a mood of irrational anger and hysteria; from endeavors to create bitter antagonisms not only between nation and nation, but between class and class, group and group, within | Saturday to Mr. Abe Kronkite . . . | which they wish to dispose of are the same borders.

And the people of every land will share that hope. For they know that the average man and worker still prefers the plowshare to the sword, the measured word to the violent phrase. They know that long after today's most provocative wisecrack has been forgotten, the world will remember the words of him who spoke with malice toward none, with charity for all.

For today the people of all lands have seen the grave dangers to which the constant preaching of hatreds, the modern obsession for violent phrase-making, can lead.... And they have seen what calm thinking and sincere statement can do to save humanity from the catastrophe that constitutes an inevitable climax to all hymns of hate. They have been reminded anew that "peace begins just where ambition ends."

If the world, and its statesmen, have learned this lessonthen the cloud through which we have just passed will show a silver lining.

H. P. Merchants Win Fourth Game In Row

The Highland Park Merchants football team defeated the Evanston Sports Association club last Sunday afternoon by a score of 13 to 0. Although the Evanston squad was successful in holding the Highland Park team scoreless during the first half of the battle, Alden Harris, shifty field general of the local eleven, managed to weave through the opposition on a quarterback sneak shortly after the game moved into the third period of play. Castelli's conversion kick was good for the extra tally. The Merchants kicked off and the game again moved into a punting duel era. In the last few minutes of play when it seemed that neither team would have another opportunity to score, Joe Cameron, Highland Park center, broke through the Evanston line to successfully block a punt. This placed the home team within easy striking distance. Frank Schmidt crashed through the line and ran the remaining seven yards for the final score.

Next Sunday afternoon the Highland Park club will meet the Division Street Merchants from Chi-F. D. Hopkins has been assigned cago. The game will be played on to the pastorate of Grace M. E. the Sunset Park gridiron and is church to succeed Rev. W. B. Dobb scheduled to get under way prompt-
