Pheasant Hunters Will Find Bumper Crop This Season

by JIM MOONEY

Twenty-six thousand pheasants were released in northern Illinois during the past summer for the hunters that were in the field for the opening of the season this morning. The weather during the past summer was not the best for the young birds that normally hatch here but that did not stop a bumper crop of these birds appearing throughout the state. My observations have proven to me that there are more pheasants this year in Lake and McHenry counties than any year to date. Farmers thru all this area have confirmed this report.

Hunters have found it very hard to get into farms to hunt during the past, this year they will find that many farmers will allow hunting for a nominal sum per hunter. Most fees are one dollar a day or one dollar per bird.

A group of hunters in Lake county near Grayslake have started a game preserve for themselves in cooperation with the state. These hunters consist of about 2,000 acres. They have posted this area as a state game refuge and introduced hundreds of birds. The area in itself is a natural breeding ground. Now these men plan to hunt one day this season on the area and this will certainly not be too much to kill off much of their reserve stock. The pheasants on this preserve will naturally spread to other farms and offer fine hunting.

If more of this work was done by other groups there would be certainly a greater number of birds protected to add to the pheasant crop each year. Partridges have been introduced in many sections of Illinois this year. There is no open season for these birds which will give them an excellent chance to become more common and in a few years give us some fine hunting.

Remember that the season is open from November 10 to 15 and that the limit is two male birds per person; the possession limit is four birds.

Rabbit Season Opens
Rabbits will be plentiful this year. If you like to get your limit I would advise you to go down south of Ottawa and all of southern Illinois for there are hundreds of them in that area.

Your hunting is now at its peak in Illinois. All the seasons are open and plenty of game is available. Let's remember a season will come along next year, so be conservative of your kill.

Girl Scout News

As good little Brownies are wont to do, the brownies in Highland Park are having a busy and happy time in Highland Park. The Lincoln School Brownie Packs are meeting in the school building this year, and when the weather permits, have their games in the school playground. They have been taking hikes; gathering leaves for scrapbooks; having leaf-raking parties; and "organizing" with a president and treasurer, who hold office for one month, at the expiration of which "term", new officers are elected. There are two brownie packs in Lincoln school. Mrs. J. M. Watkins and Mrs. Harold E. Swines are the leaders, and Mrs. A. F. Sturm and Mrs. Phillip Randall are the assistant leaders.

At the Braeside school, the Brownie pack is growing, and Mrs. Theo Uehling and her assistant, Mrs. Joseph G. Bulmer, are going to need more help. However, the mothers of the brownies have been very cooperative and assisted at the Halloween party last week.

At the age of seven, a little girl is eligible for a Brownie Pack, and at ten she may become a Girl Scout. In the Ravinia School Brownie Pack plans were made for a truly eventful day on November 8, for there was a "Fly Up Ceremony." All of the brownies went to the Girl Scout meeting. Circles were formed, one of Brownies, one of Girl Scouts. When their names were called, the Brownies stepped out of their circle and were presented with wings, brown for one year, gold for two. The Girl Scouts then came forward and took their new members into their circle. Mrs. J. L. Harris, leader, was assisted by Mrs. Jules Ladany, assistant leader, and Mrs. Arthur

G. Mason, Capt. and Mrs. John E. Long accepted the following girls in their troop: Catherine Rieker, Gale George, Adele Mason, Peggy Kerber, Peggy Stair, Virginia Bucher and Phyllis Weed.

A Treasure Hunt planned by Troop 3 of Braeside was a great success. Mrs. Julius Laegler is chairman of Training and Personnel on the Highland Park Girl Scout Council, and has found many valuable treasures in volunteer leaders for the troops and troop committees and council. We were surprised to learn, however, that she not only finds treasures but writes clues for finding them. After being shown the container which would hold clues in each instance, the group started from Braeside with the first clue, which read:

Go! It's high time to start. Run, walk skip or dart: Various clues you'll find there. Eagerly try to find the clue. Yearning to be the first ones thru. And on finding it you may return to your group without delay. Depart now, read the clue on the way.

There were four groups of six each starting out. After a short time in consultation they started out full tilt to the cemetery on County Line road, where they eventually found the clue hidden in an evergreen tree. The clue read:

One of our girls lives close by: Around the corner to her home now fly. Her mother, too, is a good Girl Scout. This hint should convince you without a doubt.

This led to Mrs. George L. Straub's, where the next clue read: The name of the next place suggests A fish and a weight. This clue is enough—so don't be late.

After finding Harrington's the clue said: When grass is green and the air is warm. Here musicians enjoyably perform. No fee is charged, so go right in the gate. Start looking at once, don't hesitate.

This was Ravinia Park entrance, where the last clue was found: And now to the home of another scout. A small wood and ground is the name of the street. The first group to reach 1881 receives a treat.

This was the home of Mrs. Grant Bulkley, where, in the recreation room, doughnuts and cider were served.

Mrs. C. O. Frisbie Jr. and Mrs. Edward Harrington, captain of Troop 3, received the winners as they arrived. Six prizes were awarded.

Mrs. Martha Love and Mrs. Berry Devine visited Mrs. George Smith in Lake Forest on Thursday.
