Spring

I know that this is spring—I've seen the winter green
And tasted of a leaf this dewy morn:
A berry bright and red was growing in the bed
That seemed the sylvan place to well adorn;
The May flower in its lair and dainty maiden hair
Was just another certain sign of spring;
The pussy willows, too, were smiling where they grew
And up above I heard a robin sing.

The April day is fair and gone is all my care,
The sun is shining brightly overhead,
A bluejay from his nest has flown into the west
And took his mate to whom he has been wed;
So now I'm very sure there's something nice in store
And little tiny eggs will soon appear,
And robin red breast, too, protecting eggs of blue
Is flying 'bout with happy song of cheer.

I know that this is spring for many things I've seen
And heard within the branches of the trees
I see no more the snow, but sunshine's all aglow
And, too, I feel a gentle kindly breeze;
So spring I know is here and gone is ev'ry tear
That winter carries with it in its train,
The flowers in their bloom eradicate the gloom
And cozy is the gentle April rain.
