The small oil paintings of a ship given each guest present were more than just announcement cards, for they had been done by the father of the bride-to-be, who although a business man, makes an avocation of marine painting, and they also tied up with the groom's position as rear-commodore of the North Shore Yacht club at Highland Park. The marine note in the decorations was further carried out by the tea table centerpiece — a blue mirror lake with a bowl of lilies of the valley on which floated a white sail boat manned by a bride and groom, and made by Miss Gourley's brother, Arthur.

The groom-to-be, his mother, his grandmother, Mrs. E. F. Winterson and his great-grandmother, Mrs. E. Burg of Chicago, represented four generations of the Boehm family present at the party.

Memorial Day

Thin are the lines of blue and gray
That fought upon yon battleground
Where birds are singing in the trees
And happiness is all around;
And hard it is now to believe
That there a valiant blood was shed
For now in quiet peace men live
Where gallant soldiers fought and bled.

We'll lay our flow'rs upon the graves
Of blue or gray and with a tear
We'll send a pray'r to Heaven's realms
But in our heart there is a fear
That once again the guns will roar
Upon some awful battle ground—
We shudder at the fearful thought
And gaze in dread upon each mound.

Those lives that thinner get each year
Have lessons ev'ry soul should learn
And at the cry of war each man
Should cry for peace and in his turn
Should speak his voice and speak aloud
And silence war cries that arise—
Let courage be our constant song
Let's answer war cries with our whys.

—Franklin Lee Stevenson.

On this Memorial Day let our hearts be filled with peace.
