Hans Schnabel to Meet Jimmy McMillen in Wrestling Match

Unbeatable Hans Schnabel, 325 pound German Oak who has been battering into submission every pro wrestler sent against him in Peg's Grayslake Arena this summer, has finally reached the top. He's been signed to go against Jimmy McMillen, Lake county's own nationally famous celebrity, in the main event of an all-star big-time wrestling program at the local sport center Friday night.

Week after week the powerful Prairie warrior who's built like a beer barrel with muscles, has been riding rough shod over everything that dared climb into the ring to face him. His vicious and very dangerous back breaker hold has proved the undoing of such stars as the Great Balbo, rough Rudy Kay, Arthur von Saxon, and dozens of others. Now the most famous brother of the family of Schnabel brothers, known as the riot squad of wrestling, is going against the next best to the world's champion, and if he slams Mac into the corner posts like he did the others, a world's championship is next in line.

A semi-windup may steal the show from the main go and will be a real test of size against speed and strength against cleverness with Friedrich von Schacht, 6 foot 6 inch, 255 pound German giant, going up against the tiny Bert Rubi, 5 foot 7 inch, 195 pound challenger. Von Schacht has been a consistent winner here this summer, and Rubi, the sensational Hungarian star, will be making his Grayslake debut.

Attractive prelims have been carded to steam the mat addicts up during the earlier minutes of the evening. In one "Bearded" Mike London, ex-shepherd boy and now a pro star with a nasty disposition, will try to outrough handsome Frankie Hart, Dutch adonis and flutter of local feminine hearts. In the other, none other than rowdy Rudy Kay himself, gas-house kid from Chicago, will return to these parts to try his latest rough and ready tactics against speedy Lefty Pacer, Ohio State heavyweight champion.

This Week in Washington

by Ralph E. Church
Representative, 10th Congressional District

Washington, D.C., July 22 — The New Deal has often been accused of operating one of the largest political and propaganda machines ever established. It is a known fact, hardly open to dispute, that the enormous number of new offices created in the last six years have been filled by the New Deal faithful, not simply as an award for past political services but in preparation for the next election. The ill-advised "purge movement" brought to light how this extensive political machine, financed by the American people generally, can be made to operate even against Democratic Senators and Congressmen themselves when the New Deal Chiefs decide among themselves who should represent the party and the people. It caused a "rebellion" and Congress has decided to take some steps toward remedying the evil.

The so-called Hatch Bill is an example. In substance it is designed to restrain government employees from using their official authority to coerce and influence voters, and it is designed to put a stop to the vicious practice of exploiting the unfortunate on relief. In a sense this measure is the answer of Congress to the "purge." I seriously doubt that a measure of this character would have obtained the congressional support it has received were it not for the purge experience. Certainly as a strictly partisan measure it would not have a chance of enactment.

Bit by bit, in one way and another, in its rebellion against Executive control and bureaucratic usurpations, the Congress is gradually placing a check on the New Deal "frankenstein" of departments, agencies and bureaus. The Hatch Bill is the most conspicuous example, but others are not to be overlooked.

In the Post Office Department Appropriation Bill of this session one will find a very significant provision. It was inserted in the bill as an amendment by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Democrat, of Wyoming. And, incidentally, Senator O'Mahoney won New Deal disfavor when he opposed the Supreme Court proposal.

This amendment provides that no executive department or agency of the Government can send out pamphlets, bulletins, books and such free of postage without having previously received a request for the publication. In other words, it is designed to put a stop to the wholesale sending out of literature under the frank by the various departments and agencies. The provision represents an effective check on the distribution of "propaganda."

The taxpayers will be interested to know how much this means to them in dollars and cents. They have been paying the postage. In 1928 the estimated revenue lost to the Government by the free transportation of materials sent out by the Executive departments was $8,537,730. Ten years later, in 1938, that figure had grown to the sum of $35,690,807. Since the New Deal has come into power the daily average of the number of pieces of literature mailed postage free by the departments is calculated at 2,103,700.

The official figures show that in the four years, from 1933 to 1937, the total cost to the taxpayers of departmental literature—the paper, printing and lost postage revenue—has been $220,803,425. It has represented a daily cost of $180,987.

It is a known fact, hardly open to dispute, that a very large percentage of the literature which has been mailed by the departments has not been, strictly speaking, of an official character but rather simply of a propaganda nature. It has been designed, not to present an accurate account of a particular department's work, but rather to paint a colorful picture of its great merits and accomplishments.

The Congress adopted the amendment of Senator O'Mahoney and thereby placed a check on the New Deal propaganda machine. And so, unwittingly, the "purge" has had some worthwhile results. It placed Congress in the mood to try to place a rein on the New Deal political-propaganda machine.
