 chairman, W. B. Bans Jr., W. J. Currotto, Mrs. Charles Rubens, Richard S. Taussig, Mrs. Tom Wyles and Herman Zischke; and the Committee on Public Information, with Alfred C. Houser as chairman.
 Renslow P. Sherer, in commenting on the Community Center and its purposes, recently stated: "While the Center is for all the citizens of Highland Park, its accent must definitely be on youth. Community Center was organized to provide the means of establishing an outlet for the energies of our young people along constructive lines. We want the youth of Highland Park to consider Community Center as their project.
 "To install in the young people a feeling of self accomplishment as far as the Center is concerned, we plan to let them take an active part in the construction of many of its appointments and furnishings. We will supply the materials. All we ask of the young folks is their time, energy and enthusiasm.
 "We feel that this approach will go far toward developing a sense of 'rugged self help,' if you will, which characteristic is so necessary to the successful moral and physical development of the modern youth."

 The outcome of these meetings was an agreement that worth while results could be obtained by instituting foreclosure proceedings against many of the delinquents. It was admitted that in cases in some localities where the back taxes penalties and special assessments approximated the value of the property, little success could be hoped for. In the case of Highland Park, however, where only a small amount of property is in great distress, and where real estate has enjoyed a comparatively active market, foreclosure proceedings would undoubtedly be successful to a great degree.
 It being some ninety days or more since all this fanfare was raised about delinquent tax collection, your reporter dropped into Commissioner Sharp's office to see what was what. Commissioner Sharp, who is breathing easier with each passing day now that the incinerator problem is entering upon less stormy seas, displayed a somewhat fretful mood when the tax problem was brought up for discussion. It took no Houdini to ascertain that all was not well with the tax collection program and when tax committee Chairman Sharp unburdened his soul, the reason was readily apparent.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, Highland Park is made up of six principle taxing bodies, namely, Deerfield-Shields High school district, School District No. 107, School District No. 108, North Shore Sanitary district and lastly, the City of Highland Park. Taxes are collected and the proceeds distributed proportionately among these agencies.
 Now the fly in the tax collection ointment is this. Foreclosure proceedings always necessitate a certain amount of expense. When a piece of property is marked for legal action an exhaustive research has to be made into the title, the amount of taxes involved, and check-ups on a thousand and one details. This investigation naturally costs money and it is the general consensus that it should be borne proportionately by the various taxing units that will benefit from the funds collected.
 When this foreclosure program was inaugurated last fall it was assumed that all the taxing bodies in Highland Park would be eager to put a shoulder to the wheel and help finance the project. To date, a 100 percent response to the committee's pleas for financial support is definitely lacking. Commissioner Sharp is of the opinion that eventually all the taxing bodies will "see the light" and come into the fold. In the meantime, however, "times a'wasting."

The City of Highland Park does not see why it should bare the brunt of paying most of the expenses involved in foreclosure proceedings when they are eligible to receive only a small amount of the proceeds. That is why the city fathers are showing concern over the tax problem.

 Crossing between intersections ranked first as a cause of death and injury. The next cause was attributed to walking on rural highways. Crossing where signal was not available was another cause. Children playing in the street was one of the factors in this large death toll.

Social Studies
Groups in Ravinia
Become Librarians

Wouldn't it be fine to organize a Social Studies Library?
 For two years the Ravinia school studies group have been enjoying room in which they have assembled the social studies books. This special library has quickly reached such proportions that it has become increasingly difficult to find necessary reference material without looking as if for the proverbial needle-in-the-haystack. At last, out of this real need has come the idea, "Let's have a real Social Studies Library."

How Shall We Start?
 "Good! But what shall we do about this?" said the children and teachers. Before long a Library Committee, chosen from children in the four upper grades, was planning carefully with their social studies teachers, just what could be done. "We must have a card system, regulations for borrowing and returning books, and an orderly and efficient arrangement of volumes, pamphlets and illustrative material," agreed the committee.
 "We need some new book-cases, paper for book pockets and some way of printing and typing," the children continued.
 "This will cost money," remarked the more practical ones.
 "Of course, we must have the approval of Mr. Wright, our superintendent, before we launch any such plans," the children thoughtfully reminded one another. "Why not choose two of us to talk over our idea with Mr. Wright?"

Our Superintendent Clark G. Wright Hears Our Plans
 "Will Kaki Watson and Nancy Holt please report their interview with Mr. Wright?" asked the chairman of the Social Studies Library Committee. So the committee learned of the warm approval and helpful advice of their friend, Mr. Wright.
 "This is something really worth doing," agreed the children. "Let's report our idea to all the children in the social studies groups and see what they think about it."

The following week the two upper grades were enthusiastically learning from Miss Newcomb, the school librarian, about the mysteries of the Dewey Decimal system of cataloguing books, classification numbers, author, title and subject indexes and many other equally intriguing facts. Before long everyone was eagerly absorbed in printing library pockets, typing cards, writing correct classification numbers into books or gluing and pasting pockets and call slips—fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth graders all have helped. Each one does what he can. Three borrowed typewriters hum busily with varying degrees of skill and accuracy. Inspectors carefully check the work. And finally, out of much free, happy and conscientious work there is evolving, almost miraculously our Social Studies Library.

Yesterday Richard Giese, Robert Schroeder, Donald Shanafelt, Bennett King, and Samuel Golden appeared, carrying two beautiful new book cases, made in their shop time, upon their willing backs.
 What is our Social Studies Library?

Now, when we need to look up stories and facts in geography and history in order to learn how civilization has begun and developed and how we can best hope to keep and improve our own democratic way of living, we will have our reference library to help us. Meanwhile we are living the democratic way of life by working and planning together to solve our own problems.

Edythe Wood Plays
Lead in Junior
Programs Production

Edythe Wood, whose lovely face and figure have been painted and drawn by America's best illustrators from every conceivable angle to illustrate dramatic scenes in a hundred popular magazine stories, will display her talents as an actress in the leading role of The Reward of the Sun God in Highland Park when the play performs here on February 23. A young audience of children and young people will see her at the Highland Park High school auditorium in the presentation sponsored by joint P.-T.A. of Deerfield township. It is a production of Junior Programs, Inc., national non-commercial organization producing approved cultural entertainment for the young.
 Miss Wood's extraordinary popularity with the magazine illustrators—she has been the heroine in pictures depicting stories in Cosmopolitan, Liberty, Saturday Evening Post, and American Magazine among others—is accountable to the fortuitous union of beauty and emotional expressiveness she displays.
 But it is her talents in emotional expressiveness, as a rising young actress, which won Miss Wood her present leading role in the Junior Programs Players production. She has been an actress in motion pictures, with Sylvia Sidney, Lief Ericson, and Aline McMahon, on the radio in a series of sketches regularly broadcast by EBC, and in professional stock, both in Montpelier, Vermont, and in the famous Yarding Playhouse at Bucks County, Pa. She is counted among one of the most promising of the theatre's younger stars, and many look for her soon to come into her own among the great of the American theatre.

 Tickets available at schools and Galls Drug store.

Mistakes Signals;
Drives Into Train;
Escapes Unhurt

Mrs. Arvid Ohman, 828 Rider lane, Highland Park, miraculously escaped serious injury Saturday when she mistook the crossing signals on Berkeley road and ran her car into the side of a fast freight train on the North Western tracks.
 Mrs. Ohman was driving east about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when she heard crossing bells ringing. Thinking they were on the North Shore line, she did not stop when she reached the North Western tracks, but drove straight ahead striking the second car behind the engine. Aside from slight shock, she escaped injury, while the front end of her car was badly damaged.

Petition N. S. Line
For Better Service
at Moraine Road

Residents living in the North section of Highland Park have presented a petition bearing the signatures of fifty citizens of this section to the North Shore Line early this week, asking for additional service at the Moraine road station.
 At the present time there are only two trains daily which stop at Moraine road, one south bound in the morning and one north bound at night.
 The petition asks that all local trains stop at Moraine station, as was their custom several years ago.
