Ralph E. Church Will Enter Race For U. S. Senate

After due deliberation and most earnest consideration, I am today announcing my candidacy for United States Senator from Illinois. As I pointed out in my widely-sent letter of last November 18th regarding the Senatorship, the problem before us is far more important than the political ambition of any candidate.

paigned except by flying home over the week-ends when Congress is not in session. I shall remain at the National Capitol fighting to protect and advance the interests of every man, woman and child in Illinois.

I make my appeal to the people themselves of Illinois. With the world on fire and steady hands needed at the national helm, this is no time for paltry, stultifying factionalism, nor for the "tin horn", "Pied Piperings" of such hand-picked, machine candidates, as for the last ten years have produced in Illinois total and unnecessary Republican defeats.

There is just one issue: Who, as Republican nominee for the Senate, would best insure a Republican victory in November? More specifically: Which candidate would the voters in November consider best qualified by experience, training and record in public service to represent this great State of Illinois in the handling of domestic and delicate international affairs?

In a time of such national crisis it would be totally selfish for me to consider my own preference. The unparalleled response to my November 18th letter from Republican leaders all over Illinois, plus strong recent pressure for a new, undefeated and experienced candidate, for the sake of victory in November, has convinced me that the people believe my first call is to run on my record as a candidate for the United States Senate.

Later I may have a more detailed statement. I shall not, however, indulge at any time in any promises, political or otherwise. A man's record of past performance is more formidable and more persuasive than any future promises, no matter how eloquently given. Nor shall I, at any time, merely utter platitudes and state a platform of generalities to express my attitude of any issue.

Be it on questions regarding unemployment, neutrality, national defense, business encouragement, labor's rights and welfare, agriculture, social security, or any other problems, I need not speak: my record is there—a record indelibly written during sixteen years in the Legislature at Springfield and nearly six years in Congress.

My one regret is that in the short time remaining and with Congress in important session, I cannot personally meet every citizen in Illinois and say, "I am the man who wants to be your Senator." I have never missed a session or roll call since I went to Congress. Consistently, I shall not leave Washington to campaign except by flying home over the week-ends when Congress is not in session.
