LIBRARY

The Wilmette Public Library was host last Wednesday, April 24, to the librarians and library trustees of the suburban area for their annual regional meeting. It was an all-day meeting, with luncheon and the afternoon discussions held at the Shawnee Country club.

The morning meetings were devoted to a panel discussion of library finances and library staffs, with a second speech devoted to the possibilities and future of a large regional library to service this area. The subject of regional libraries is a perennial favorite and offers food for profitable thought to library administrators.

Two trustees from downstate libraries spoke at the afternoon meeting, the first one discussing the rather recent Municipal Budget bill which has proved to be a stumbling block in some libraries simply because its provisions were not understood. The second trustee told of his own experience in helping to modernize a small township library. Two other speakers reviewed recent books, one devoting her attention to adult books and the other mentioning titles suitable for vocational information for boys and girls.

The library has recently added to its reference shelves a book by Owen Jones called "The Grammar of Ornament." It is profusely illustrated with colored plates and is a general outline of architectural and decorative art, with an opening chapter on the ornament of savage tribes.

HEDGES

Hide and Beautify

If there are unsightly objects in your outlook or your lawn appears unfinished and ragged, beautify it with a hedge. Whatever the need . . . a screen twenty feet tall or a knee-high border, there are shrubs and evergreens ideally adapted for use as hedges. They are inexpensive yet valuable assets in the home landscape and excellent back-grounds for perennial borders. Ask us for suggestions for hedges, screens, wind-breaks, vines or ground covers.
