

"They Say"

Witches do all right with broomsticks, but not the American army, says Mr. Gifford of Congress. He laments the fact that the treasury department, the army and navy officials get in each other's hair and want to train a great army of men and draft them with nothing but broomsticks on their shoulders.

Interesting it is to compare the United States' proposed compulsory training bill with what Canada, actually at war, has done. For every 300,000 men deemed necessary for us, Canada has 30,000. She requires one month's elementary training at $1.20 a day and in the first year of mobilization only single men are required to serve. Her draft was enacted one year after entry into war.

Ludlow strikes a rueful note in one of Congress' sessions. "The immediate problem is to get our defenses in order and no one appears to be giving any thought, or at least, any adequate thought, to how the bills are to be paid. And yet this is a phase of the approach to national defense which must have attention if our country is to remain financially sound and vigorous to meet all of the strains of the fearful years that are immediately ahead. . . . Heavy taxation is certain and, as much as we would all regret to see a capital levy, I am not certain that it can ultimately be avoided. The point I wish to stress is that, while we must go ahead as rapidly as possible building our defense, we should be giving more attention to the associate problem of paying the bills so as to keep America sound and solvent."

Debts are piling up so that clerks cannot compute the national debt. The statutory debt limit was raised several months ago to $49,000,000,000. Contractual authority has been granted in bill after bill so that $50,000,000,000 debt estimate now is only a starter. If the compulsory training bill passes, another billion will be added.

National defense is hemisphere defense and so while in ordinary times the government is loath to make appropriations in excess of budget estimates, there is no hesitation to do so now. Specific items are raised millions of dollars.

Tit for tat. That's the Monroe Doctrine. The original doctrine is in two parts, designed to be inseparable by the sponsors. The United States will regard any attempt by Europe powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety." A qualification of that is "with the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power in the New World" we have not interfered and shall not interfere.

Republican Day To Be Held Aug. 21 At Illinois Fair

Unable to secure Wendell L. Willkie, Republican candidate for president, as the principal speaker for Republican Day at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield on August 21, the committee in charge of arrangements have now turned their attention to perfecting plans for the day.

Two hundred thousand tickets are to be distributed among Illinois Republicans next week. The tickets will be placed in the mail on August 15th to all county chairmen for distribution among the precinct committeemen in every precinct in the state.

Managers for Mr. Willkie's campaign for President felt that Republican Day at the Illinois State Fair followed too closely upon the date of Mr. Willkie's acceptance speech at Elwood, Indiana, to have him rushed into Illinois for a second important address. The campaign managers, however, did give Illinois Republican leaders assurance that Willkie would make a downstate

2930th Visitor To Model Home Wins Weather Vane

Because she was the 2,930th visitor to register at the model home in Deerfield yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Joseph Drobnick of 1517 North Avenue, Waukegan, was presented with an ornamental wrought iron weather vane made by the Hvale Forge at Deerfield. In the presentation picture above are (left to right) Mrs. W. A. Tennermann, Mr. and Mrs. Drobnick and Clarence Wilson, president of the Chamber of Commerce which is sponsoring the model home.

speech, probably in Springfield, during September or early in October.

Thomas E. Dewey, New York's famous district attorney, and Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, have been invited to address

Republican Day at the fair, but whether they will be able to keep the engagement is, as yet, unknown.

All candidates on the Republican state ticket, headed by Dwight H. Green and C. Wayland Brooks, nominees for Governor and U. S. Senator, will speak at the meeting.

State Senator Charles M. Thompson, Harrisburg, will be chairman of Republican Day activities in the grand stand. He will be introduced by Timothy Swain, Peoria, president of the Young Republicans of Illinois.

H. L. Williamson, general chairman of the day, will introduce State Chairman Ben L. Berve, who in turn will introduce Swain.

From the requests being received at the Republican Day headquarters at Hotel Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, indications are that this year's rally at the State Fair will be one of the largest in the history of the event, managers say.
