CORRECTIONS

We are sorry for the mistakes in last week's columns of the Deerfield section. Through some error the Bannockburn Garden club, which met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Cleaver on Monday afternoon was mixed up with Mrs. Julius Reader's home, where she was entertaining the Altar and Rosary society. The bowling news had the enlightening heading of "New Books Added to the Deerfield Library," and the list of books was nowhere to be found. The number of persons who called regarding the errors indicate that a great many people are readers of The Press.

Deerfield Observes American Education Week with Ceremony

Two slogans will fill the air this week. Slogans that are sound for the American Education week. "Education for the common defence." This is the theme on which American Education is operating this year. In order that you may see your schools the second slogan is "Visit your schools" has been adopted.

The Deerfield Grammar school is operating under the above slogan and wants you to visit during the week. We want you to see what we are doing in this fight to "education for the common defence."

The school during American Education week will not carry any special programs. It will run in every day fashion because that is how it wants you to see it work.

However, there are seven points upon which the work of American schools are proceeding. The following statements will help you to see the program of your schools.

Enriching Spiritual Life America was founded upon a spiritual foundation by earnest pioneers seeking to govern themselves and to worship God in their own way. On this foundation a great nation has been built. A rich spiritual life quickens aspirations, stabilizes conduct, supports family life, improves the community, and fortifies the state.

Great teachers of all faiths in schools, public and private, encourage religious feeling and practice as the foundation of moral conduct. The schools guide pupils to enriched spiritual living through the development of character, the encouragement of right conduct, the opening of minds to new horizons, the practice of tolerance, a steady emphasis upon the sacredness of human personality, and a constant leadership in the search for truth, goodness, and beauty.

Strengthening Civic Loyalties If America is to remain a strong beacon of freedom in a world where many lights are burning low, civic loyalty must be persistently cultivated. Good citizenship calls for intelligent action, not mere lip service. It requires practice in the art, technique, and spirit of self-government—constant effort to improve community and country. Although government of the people by the people, and for the people has not solved all our problems, who would exchange it for the tyranny and force which prevail today in so many parts of the world?

The school is the proving ground of citizenship. In the school, the child takes his place in a community of equals. Here he learns to give and take, to cooperate, and to practice self-government. The development of good citizenship is a primary aim of the American school.

Financing Public Education The public elementary and secondary schools of the United States cost two billion dollars a year. While this gives an average of $75 per pupil per year, the figures range from $135 in New York State to $25 in Mississippi.

School costs have risen during recent decades because more and better school services have been provided to more pupils, and because the purchasing power of the dollar has been greatly reduced.

Expenditures for relief and old-age pensions are a relatively new demand on government. Few could disapprove of meeting these needs, but as such costs mount there is also widespread insistence upon tax reduction. It would be folly to scuttle the schools to meet either type of demand. Education is an economic asset, an investment in human resources.

Developing Human Resources Population in the United States grew rapidly until recently. Now immigration has been greatly reduced and the birth rate, which in 1815 exceeded 25 babies per 1,000 small population compared to its population each year, has dropped to 17. The United States has a

Open Workshop for British War Relief

The Deerfield and Bannockburn chapter of the British War Relief society has opened a workshop in Deerfield—immediately west of the post office.

The object of the shop is to collect, sort, mend, press, pack and ship warm clothing to refugees and those in the war zones who have lost their own possessions, as well as to knit socks, scarves, mitts, helmets, sweaters, etc., for the British Armed Forces. To this end, we are asking all those who have warm clothing not in use or outgrown, to send it to the shop. If you are unable to deliver it personally, a call to Deerfield 580 will bring a car to pick it up.

A corps of workers, under the guidance of Mrs. E. R. Zettler, will be at the shop from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. We are especially indebted to Mrs. Zettler for her untiring effort in this cause. She has given unstintingly of her time and has been largely responsible for the success of the work.

As chairman of the Clothes Collection department, Mrs. A. Torbet has as her assistants: Deerfield—Mrs. Ball, Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Peter Anderson.

An experienced "knitter" will be on hand at all times to teach and assist. Knitting may be done at the shop or at home. Mrs. Fuller has a large supply of yarn and will be glad to hear from anyone who wishesto knit. Mrs. Zettler also can use workers.
