Deerfield Observes American Education Week with Ceremony

resources. Our people have achieved a high standard of living compared to other nations through the development of these natural resources. Yet millions are unemployed; hunger exists amid plenty; crime takes a vast toll; ill health ravages the underprivileged. These conditions need not exist in a wealthy nation. They can be corrected by improving the individual and promoting the general welfare, which the schools seek to do. They are guiding 30 million youth and many adults to more abundant living and a better understanding of human needs.

Safeguarding National Resources
If one has the materials and skills needed to build a house, he can build it; without materials, he cannot. Likewise, to enjoy abundant living, a people must have resources. The United States has vast resources. With only 6 1/2 per cent of the world's people, it has 45 per cent of the world's wealth. The natural resources of our nation were so vast that waste was unnoticed until recently. Now that one-third of our top soil, most of our forests, and much of our mineral wealth and animal life are gone, the loss is felt. America cannot continue to waste her substance and endure.

There is still time to safeguard resources so that we shall have plenty if we consistently strengthened the conservation movement. The schools will be a mighty factor in this vital educational campaign.

Perpetuating Individual Liberties
What is liberty? In America it means freedom to speak and write, to live where one wishes, to work at the job of one's choice, and to have a part in self-government. But the mere declaration of rights does not constitute liberty. Academic rights count for little. Is a man free who cannot find a job? Whose family is thereby hungry and unclothed?

In a civilized nation, liberty does not mean freedom to do entirely as one chooses. There are rights of others each must respect. We find true liberty by denying ourselves smaller privileges in order to secure great basic rights for all. Education perpetuates individual liberties by developing a people able to govern themselves and determined that America shall remain the land of the free and the home of a people unafraid of duties that liberty entails.

Keep Your American Schools
More than one American out of four finds his major fulltime interest in the schools as pupil, teacher, or custodian. School enrollments are: 21,750,000 in public elementary schools, 7,200,000 in public high schools, 1,400,000 in colleges and universities, 2,690,000 in private and parochial schools. Over a million young people 16 to 24 years of age are out of school and out of work. Altho high schools are expanding rapidly, 3 of every 10 persons of high school age are not enrolled. More than a million teachers staff the schools. One in five of them are men. The school term in cities averages 181 days a year; in rural areas 163 days. There are 124,000 one-teacher rural schools. School buildings are valued at over 12 billion dollars. The cost of American education is less than 10 cents a day for each person of voting age.

LIBRARY

The Highland Park Public library suggests the reading of poetry as an antidote to the feelings aroused by the menacing newspaper headlines. The best poetry expresses in a few words the characteristic traits and emotions of humanity which have endured throughout all ages.

A few lines from the many collections of poetry in the library are:
Our noisy years seem moments in the being
Of eternal Silence.

What creed can show a courage and a confidence like this?
A workman on a girder, singing
down the stark abyss.

A little Road says, Go
The little House says, Stay
And O, it's bonny here at home,
But I must go away.

Flower in the crannied wall,
I pluck you out of the crannies,
I hold you here, root and all, in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are root and all, and all in all
I should know what God and man is.

I've never seen a hill but I
Have dreamed a hill behind it,
Nor ever watched a falling star
Without the hope I'd find it;
And all the islands of the sea
Have known my name and called to me.

Back of Chicago the open fields—
were you ever there?
Trains coming toward you out of the West—
Streaks of light on the long grey plains? Many a song—
Aching to sing.

Eric Sevareid, CBS Correspondent Will Be Heard Nov. 13th

Eric Sevareid, CBS French and British correspondent, is back from Europe. He returned on board the same Clipper as Ambassador Joseph B. Kennedy and will make one of his first addresses in Evanston Town Hall at 8:15 o'clock on Wednesday, November 13, in the auditorium of the Evanston Woman's club.

Before the fall of France, Sevareid had charge of the Paris office, broadcasting daily accounts to the United States over the facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System. He followed the French government in its flight to Tours and then to Bordeaux, scooping the world with news of the reformation of the Cabinet and the appeal for peace. Subsequently he travelled to England on a boat that was subjected to aerial bombardment and since has been sleeping in the studios in London or travelling in the British Isles.

No more recent or up-to-the-minute tale can be told as the audience will hear at first hand the events that have for so long been masked in censorship. He has tales of broadcasting from a perfume factory in France which had been hastily rigged as a studio and will describe how engineers sat at the controls of the transmitter, located 150 miles inland, while the Germans approached, only putting the station off the air when forced to by the invaders.

Skokie Players to Select Play Jury As Innovation Nov. 16

Something new in theatricals will be the feature of the evening when the Skokie Players present "Night of January 16th" in the Elm Place school auditorium on Saturday evening, November 16. There have been plays before with vague endings, but this is the first one in which the audience takes an integral part in its development and conclusion. With an attractive and talented young Highland Parker, Ruth Gould, who portrays the leading part, on trial, the jury selected from the audience is given the problem of deciding her guilt or innocence.

As they enter the auditorium, patrons may leave their names as candidates for jury duty. These names are given to the clerk of the court, who places them in a drum and when these are well shuffled, he will draw 12 names. The 12 that are drawn will be selected to serve. As the clerk calls their names, they, one by one, step up on the stage and take their places in a regular jury box just as they would do in a legitimate court trial, are sworn in, and listen to the testimony. Both men and women are eligible and each juror will be refunded the amount of his or her admission.

Between the acts, the jurors are led off the stage to a small deliberation room. Each act represents one day of the trial. Just before the ending of the third act, the jury retires for the last time to render a verdict. They vote after a short discussion and although legally, a unanimous decision is required for a verdict, for the sake of dramatic brevity, a majority vote is taken as decisive for this trial.

When "Night of January 16th" was first presented in New York, it was feared that this innovation might not prove popular. Women might not like to have their escorts leave them to sit in the jury box and patrons might prefer to watch the play from the auditorium rather than from the stage. But such fears proved groundless. Not only would the public gladly serve on the jury, but it was pulling wires to get the chance. Each performance averaged a 100 candidates. And at no time, was there a clown in the jury box to spoil the performance. The chief problem created by the juries was their restlessness. The jurors liked to stroll around the lobby between the acts, but, of course, that could not be permitted, since jurors must be strictly removed from any possibility of influence or pressure brought to bear upon their decision. Also, in this case, they must be on hand at the commencement of each act.

Is Karen Andre guilty of murder, or is she innocent? That is the question for this jury to decide.

Annual Book Fair Opens Tuesday at Elm Place School

During the week of November 10-16 American Education Week will be observed. The slogan this year is "Education for the Common Defense." At the Elm Place school parents are invited to visit the school any time during the week. The annual Book Fair will be held from Tuesday through Friday.

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 12, at 7:30, parents of 50 through eighth grade children are invited to visit the home rooms of their children for conferences with the teachers. On Wednesday evening, Nov. 13, at 7:30 parents of kindergarten thru fourth grade children are invited to visit their children's rooms. The general topic to be considered is "The Place of Reading in the School Program."

After the discussion in the home room, parents are invited to visit the Book Fair with the teachers.
