Illinois League Of Women Voters Hold
Milk Council Feb. 17

Believing that a milk council composed of organizations and individuals who have an interest in the subject of milk would be desirable, the Illinois League of Women Voters called a meeting on Monday, February 17, to discuss its establishment.

Milk, because of its need for special handling and because of the fact that it is a product almost without a substitute for household use, is a goods whose production and marketing has more than ordinary public interest, says Mrs. Maurice Pollak of Highland Park, state chairman of the Economic Welfare Department of the Illinois league, in the letter of invitation to attend the meeting. The following organizations as well as interested individuals were included: Illinois P.-T. A., Federation of Women's clubs, A.A.U.W., Council of Social Agencies, Illinois Home Bureau, Illinois Medical society, Illinois Dental society, Chicago Association of Commerce, Conference Against High Cost of Living, Milk Drivers union, Inside Dairy Workers union, Illinois Agricultural association, Pure Milk association, Milk Distributors association, and others.

As tentative aims of the organization Mrs. Pollak lists the following:

1. To serve as a clearing house of activities of the member organizations concerned with milk.
2. To study the administration of all public agencies dealing with milk.
3. To promote mutual understanding among groups represented on the council: farmer, dealer, worker, and consumer.
4. To insure adequate representation of all interested groups on price fixing boards and
5. To consider proposed legislation affecting milk.
6. To disseminate information to the public.

Mrs. G. K. Hardacre, Pub.

"With Love and Irony"
by Lin Yutang

291 pages. Reviewed by Whitt N. Schultz.

Many prominent writers have praised Lin Yutang. All of them agree that Mr. Yutang has a message that should be received by all thinking people.

Previous to his latest work, Mr. Yutang wrote the popular book, "Moment In Peking." This has received great praise and the author has used this laudation as an inspiration to write a new and equally as delightful a book. His latest writing is aptly entitled "With Love and Irony." As one has said in summarizing this new creation of Yutang's: "... the wise and merry Chinese philosopher offers here more remarks and glances about the world and its people, East and West." Lin Yutang has seen "the people of Chinese and their hardships," and with this knowledge and with his refreshing writing technique, he philosophizes. There is no doubt in my mind that Mr. Yutang is a teacher. He is the kind of teacher, however, who can make one observe and learn with little effort. This I think requires skill, and Lin Yutang has it.

"With Love and Irony" is a book of short essays, sketches, and satires with a biting wit about them. Mr. Yutang discusses a wide range of subjects in the pages of his book. Truly "With Love and Irony" is a conglomeration of written mental impressions gleaned from the keen observations that he has made. He cleverly knits his many ideas together and turns out a highly readable book. After one reads "With Love and Irony," one has a pretty clear opinion of Lin Yutang, the man. In short then the book is nothing more than an enjoyable presentation of one man's beliefs about this peculiar world and its peculiar people.

This book is not "hot off of the press." Rather, it is about a month old and therefore it has had a fair amount of time to mellow and to become established. I think that Mr. Yutang could have presented his unreserved opinions with more subtlety. He is quite frank in this book and I think that he could have been far more effective if he had gone about his vivid writing casually and unobtrusively. Sometimes he tries too hard to shock his readers, and the result is that he tends to divert the reader's attention from what is being said to the less effective means of how it is being said! These are the only faults that I have to find. Excluding these defects, I think that "With Love and Irony" is commendable and worthy of reading if one honestly wishes to know what a Chinese writer thinks.

Mischa Elman To
On N. S. Series

"A program for everyone" is the way in which sponsors of the North Shore series this week characterized the coming recital by Mischa Elman, concert violinist, who will appear in Highland Park on March 4.

"Mr. Elman's violin technique has always been noted for its ability to captivate any audience, old or young, musically inexperienced or familiar with the finest artistry," the sponsors stated. "Add to this the fact that this Highland Park program will be composed of numbers which are familiar and completely enjoyable and it will be seen that this recital should appeal to every one."

The musician will appear in Highland Park for the first time as the fourth feature of this season's North Shore Series in the auditorium of the Highland Park high school. The famed "Elman tone" and the charm and dignity of the artist's musical approach have endeared him to an entire generation of concertgoers in this country, and it is an exceptional opportunity which will be afforded the North Shore's music enthusiasts when he appears in this community.

Mr. Elman's program in Highland Park will include the Handel D major sonata, Beethoven's Kreutzer sonata, the Mendelssohn concerto in E minor, and four shorter numbers by Chopin, Defalla, Wieniawski, and Brahms. His accompanist will be Leopold Mittman, gifted pianist.

People who do not hold season subscriptions to the North Shore Series will, nevertheless, be able to obtain tickets for this single event. In order to secure choice locations, they should be ordered now from the Treasure Chest, 390 Central Ave., Highland Park. The telephone number is H. P. 3099.
