"War Refugees"—

trait by Allan Ramsey of Sir Phillip Jennings Clark. Ramsey was the first of the great Scottish painters and was a worthy forerunner of Sir Henry Raeburn who is represented by the beautiful portrait of Lady Meadowbroke. Raeburn resisted the temptation to move to London and held complete artistic sway in his native Edinburgh. It is said that Reynolds, always of a somewhat jealous nature did his best to persuade Raeburn that he would be much better off at home than in the strange city of London, feeling sure that this fellow artist would present a serious rival. As it turned out, fashionable London went to Edinburgh to be painted.

To John Hoppner R.A. we are indebted for many beautiful paintings of children and in our collection that of his son with his favorite dog must rank high. For a very original style of portrait we come to the example by Nathional Hone of Charles Harvey. Mr. Harvey was a lawyer and a man of letters as will be noted by the group of books and papers on the table beside him. At about this time many artists introduced into their pictures articles suggesting the interests of their sitters which had the effect of developing a more personal feeling with the subject of the portrait.

Of the few women painters of this time, Margaret Carpenter is the most outstanding as may be seen by the delightful portrait of Princess Amelia, daughter of George III, who rightly or wrongly was credited with the American Revolutionary War.

The group of three intimate portraits might still serve their original purpose to grace a boudoir or small sitting room. The portrait of Lady Macdonald is by Sir Thomas Lawrence, while the pair of portraits of the vivacious Misses Guinnes are from the brush of George Romney—famous for his numerous portraits of Lady Hamilton.

Two historical portraits of a later date are George Stevenson, inventor of the steam engine painted by George Richmond and the self portrait of Wm. Frith, famous artist of such well known pictures as "Derby Day" and "The Railroad Station."

In the early 19th century, starting with John Constable came a great school of landscape painters, and it is fortunate that it is possible to include a group of these in the exhibition.

From the Findlay Gallery collection, to whom we are indebted for the arrangement of the exhibition, will be shown a group of contemporary American and English paintings selected mainly for their suitability for use in the decorative schemes for country houses. It is interesting to note the third generation of Find-lay's is now operating the art galleries, originally founded in Kansas City. Mr. Walstein C. Findlay, Jr. being director of the gallery at 424 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

The Art Department of the Woman's Club of which Mrs. Clarence J.
Bassler is chairman, invite all who are interested in seeing this collection to an informal tea on Sunday, April 20th from three to five o'clock. The exhibition will be open daily to club members with Mr. Sidney Leger in attendance.

N.S. International Relations Class To Meet Tuesday

The North Shore International Relations class of the National Council of Jewish Women, conducted by Mrs.
David H. Cahn of Glencoe, meets at Temple on Tuesday, April 1, at 10:00.
The program is so full of material of insistent importance that it is hoped that the class will cooperate by its promptness.

The growing rapprochement between Canada and the United States has been emphasized by the recent activity with reference to the St.
Lawrence Waterway project, with its implications not only for hemispheric defense but for long-run collaboration between these oldest of "good neighbors" on the continent.
Canada's problems in a very real sense are projecting themselves as potentially our problems also. The study of Canada, therefore, being made for this session of the class, by Mrs. David Joseph, Highland Park, is particularly timely, and community as well class attendance at this important meeting is cordially welcomed.
