Washington, D. C. AN INSIDE STORY

Word trickling back to the diplomatic corps from Germany indicates that Hitler is beginning to realize that the United States means business, and that he made a tragic mistake in not accepting the advice of his more conservative diplomats who warned him of this in the first place.

In fact, the inside story, which now can be told, is one of the most tragic of the war. Possibly it had not been for overweening personal jealousies the war might even have been prevented.

What happened was that when Hans Dieckhoff, German ambassador to Washington, returned to Berlin in 1938, he brought back a strong report that the United States would enter the war eventually if Germany became the aggressor. He was ready to warn that Germany faced a repetition of 1917-18. But Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop would not let him see Hitler.

Ribbentrop, probably the most ambitious man around der Fuehrer and a great friend of Himmler, wanted to be the funnel for all advice going to Hitler. Also he was feeding him his own kind of aggressive advice, not the cooling caution of Ambassador Dieckhoff.

In the same cautious school with the ambassador, were Baron Von Neurath, recently ousted as governor of Czechoslovakia because of his moderate views; Hjalmar Schacht, governor of the Reichsbank, now in virtual retirement; and Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, Hitler's former commander and more recently consul general at San Francisco. Even Field Marshal Goering was much more moderate than Von Ribbentrop.

Czech Putsch Delayed. It was Captain Wiedemann, who, around May, 1938, chiefly persuaded Hitler not to invade Czechoslovakia. He was then Hitler's military aide and attended a meeting of der Fuehrer's inner advisers at which general staff advised caution. Finally Hitler, exasperated, threw up his arms and ordered them all out of the room. But Wiedemann stayed behind, and finally persuaded his chief to delay the march into Czechoslovakia at least until the fall of 1938—which was done.

Later, it was Wiedemann and his moderates who persuaded Hitler to receive Chamberlain and Daladier at Munich. But by this time it was too late for Ambassador Dieckhoff to tell his story.

Ribbentrop never forgave Wiedemann for this. Also his vaunting ambition would permit no rival close to Hitler. So, shortly thereafter, he got Wiedemann transferred to a distant and relatively unimportant German consulate in the U.S.A. Later when Wiedemann was deported from this country, it is significant that Ribbentrop once again transferred him as far as possible from Berlin—this time to Tientsin, China.

The foreign minister of Germany wants no moderates around.

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN Don't be surprised if a U. S. sailor disembarks a load of Nazi saliors and turns them over to the justice department to be tried on charges of "piracy."

It is even possible that in the "haul" may be an armed Nazi raider or two that had been operating down Brazil way. Anything may happen these eventful days since the President enunciated U. S. determination to maintain freedom of the seas, and branded Nazi submarines and surface raiders in American waters as "pirates." Armed Nazi ships are prowling American waters and the U. S. navy has its orders.

It can be revealed that neither the justice nor war department would be surprised if they had some "pirate" seamen and "pirate" craft deal with soon. Both have been quietly studying for a week the law and precedents concerning such an eventuality.

The war department enters the picture because under the law all war prisoners landed on U. S. soil come under custody of the army. However, the U. S. is not at war, so there is doubt over the army's jurisdiction.

No final decision has been reached, but the consensus of the legal experts is that any such "pirates" should be turned over to the justice department.

One suggested procedure is that the Nazis be landed at a U. S. port and then jailed by the justice department as aliens without passports. But most of the legal authorities contend that the Nazis should be dealt with squarely as buccaneers.

CAPITAL CHAFF

In a direct membership election, the American Newspaper Guild has overwhelmingly defeated the leftist clique which for several years has controlled the national offices of the union. The entire group was cleaned out and a militant anti-Red slate elected.

Cordell Hull has a new car, a long sleek limousine, but without either radio or heater. Quoted at $2,613 for the retail trade, the car cost the government only $1,800. Also gas costs only eight cents a gallon.

Merchandising An Essential Service Says E. J. Poag

This is no time to let down on merchandising.

On the contrary, sound merchandising is more than ever a public service that will elicit a new, eager responsiveness from the customers of every manufacturer and retailer in this country.

The right kind of merchandising represents to the progressive merchant, his opportunity—his greatest assurance in the changing conditions of today's market.

E. J. POAG Assistant General Sales Manager, Dodge Division, Chrysler Corporation

Practically every commodity that is sold today is expected by the buyer to serve longer, more efficiently, more economically.

The buyer wants to know as much as he can about any product in which he invests his money. Merchandising that gives him all the facts, that enables him to make the best possible investment, is the sound procedure which alone is essential to success under conditions governing current business.

No better example can be found than the merchandising of motor trucks. A truck is strictly an implement of business and industry—an essential utility. The purchaser of a motor truck wants to know definitely if the truck he intends to buy has the power, speed, capacity and maneuverability for the job he knows the truck must do.

The merchant must study his prospective customer's needs. He must know—and not guess at—the exact size and type of truck and all the equipment the vehicle must have to do the job in question efficiently, dependably, and to stand up in that particular type of service over the longest period of time.

That is the type of public service that the merchandising of Dodge Jobbed trucks has been rendering to American truck operators for years. It is the type of merchandising that dovetails with the nation's needs for adequate defense transportation. Unless merchandising is as sound in every respect as the product for which it serves as the medium of distribution, it cannot succeed.

Fairy Tales

"And though you be foolish or though you be wise With hair of silver or gold You could never be young as the fairies are And never as old."

Rose Fylenam

Do we generally recognize and appreciate the values our old fairy tales offer?

There is no philosophy that is deeper than that which underlies some of these stories, and certainly, no psychology is more important than that which is so well illustrated in the best of them.

As aids in developing imagination, which needs particular attention during the present time, the fairy tales are invaluable. Properly chosen the fairy tales cultivate the sense of humor, equally important through times of distress. In many cases they will satisfy the child's natural longing and furnish a much needed outlet for pent-up emotions.

In addition, the fairy tales will build a foundation for appreciation of real literature later in life. They bring to the child the beauty and the magic which characterizes all great literature. Fairy Tales—Andersen.

NEW YORK—During his 16 years in the house, Representative Lindsay Warren of North Carolina used to lie back in his chair with his eyes closed. Deceptively Sleepy seemingly Eyed, Warren is asleep. But he never Alert as Watchdog was. When he snapped into action, his mates noted that he had missed nothing of even the most complicated goings on. To them he was known as "The Fox."

Similarly, not much has been heard of him since he became comptroller general two years ago, but here he is suddenly in action with a brief against the National Youth administration, accusing it of playing politics to keep up its membership rolls and get appropriations. Characteristically, he goes into details.

Bulky, bull-necked, pompadoured and of a general leathery makeup, Mr. Warren liked to go fishing in old clothes at Hatteras or Kitty Hawk. He didn't want to be bothered with this comptroller general job, although it pays $10,000 a year for 15 years. His predecessor, the penny-pinching John Raymond McCarl, who once nicked a pullman berth item on General Pershing's expense account, was known as "the watch dog of the treasury." Mr. Warren didn't want to be a watch dog, and after Mr. McCarl quit, in 1936, President Roosevelt offered Mr. Warren the job three times before he took it.

One of his three children, Lindsay Jr., aged 16, is ailing. The importance of getting the best medical care for the boy, and his desire for a permanent home is said to have induced him to accept. He had been one of the most popular men in congress, and watch dogs aren't altogether popular.

His post carries more power than almost any in the federal job portfolio, although no quix entrant would be apt to list it.

He passes on governmental appropriations, audits governmental accounts, settles claims and in numerous other ways polices hidden or furtive charges in federal expenditures. He had valuable training for this in his long experience as chairman of the house committee of accounts.

He is 51 years old, a native of Washington, N. C., up "through channels" in politics, as county attorney and state senator. He has been regarded as one of the ablest political strategists of the Democratic party. Furthermore, there is a legend that he once trimmed the President handsomely in a weekend poker game. Being deceptively sleepy-eyed, and at the same time alert makes him a formidable poker player.

REINHARDT HEYDRICH, setting up drumhead justice in the former Czech provinces, with more than 100 executions to date, has improved Heydrich Possibly greatly on Has Cost-Finding System on Killings and casual techniques of the Germans after the Franco-Prussian war.

In the latter instance the French Francis Trirer gave the Germans a lot of real trouble. The reprisals were ruthless and widespread, but unsystematic, and quite amateurish compared to Heydrich's highly professional exploits, for the fatherland and the iron heel.

Old Baron Constantin von Neurath, whom Heydrich succeeds as "protector" in the Czech region, liked to shoot wild boars, but held back on shooting too many people. So they give a younger man a chance. The new "protector" was Hitler's finger-man in the 1934 blood-purge, one of his principal victims being his friend Ernst Roehm, with whom he had risen to Nazi party eminence in the SS organization. They immediately afterward made him director of the Berlin office of the Gestapo.

As he rose in the Gestapo, Heydrich established precise and up-to-date methods for killings and mayhem.

It was in 1938, when the Gestapo took on the activities of the "International Criminal Police commission," that he foreshadowed the wider outreach of his espionage system. He said: "We are aware that the criminal activities of the world can only be fought internationally." It was reported at the time that in his office there was built up a dossier on "criminals" all over the world, who had spoken disrespectfully of Nazi Germany. One exploit which won him increased power was fishing Schuschnigg's private letters and papers.
