YOUR CITY GOVERNMENT: WHAT IT IS DOING

By Elmore M. Murphy

E. M. Murphy

Monday evening's city council meeting was completed in just about record time. The whole proceedings from the opening gavel to the motion for adjournment did not take over twenty minutes. The only reports offered by the department heads on the council were made by Commissioners Gourley and Swanson. Commissioner Gourley asked for formal sanction of his action last week in directing the water department to go to the rescue of the City of Highwood when the latter's plant experienced trouble in supplying water to that community. This was a case of an old customer returning to its first love at the first sign of trouble. Although the arrangement is only temporary it must give the officials of Highland Park some satisfaction in being able to come to the rescue of its embarrassed neighbor to the north.

Commissioner Swanson's report dwelled largely on drainage problems which have seemed to plague the community to a more severe extent than usual this year, due to the excessive rains. He stated that his department had done all it could from the city's standpoint to alleviate the drainage situation around the pond in the Lincoln and Beech streets area. He added that a permanent cure for the trouble in this district would not be affected until facilities were put in to drain the water to the Sheridan road main, which undertaking presented quite a problem as a right of way across vacant property had to be procured.

Commissioner Swanson, while agreeing with the premise that a large part of Highland Park's drainage problems find their source in inadequate mains, is also of the opinion that a bit of cooperation on the part of the citizens in the community in keeping leaves out of the gutters would be a great help. The problem of draining off surface water in the fall is tough enough even under the best of circumstances, but when the season is unusually wet like the present one, the work is greatly magnified.

The only other interruption in the course of the meeting that caused it to deviate from its routine road was a petition presented to the council by several members of the Westgate Improvement association asking that the community in which these people live be re-zoned from Class B property to Class A property. The petitioners stated that they had approximately 90 per cent of the property owners and 75 per cent of the land represented in their petition.

In presenting its petition the members of the Westgate Improvement association stated that the change in zoning was asked with the thought in mind of contributing to the welfare of not only the southwest section of the city, but to the community as a whole. Inasmuch as the vast majority of the lots in this section already measure up to the requirements of Class A property no trouble from this source was looked for.

In receiving the petition, Mayor Ronan stated that the matter would have to be referred to the Zoning Commission for action. He intimated that as far as he was concerned he was wholeheartedly in favor of granting the petition but that it would have to follow the regular course as prescribed by law. Commissioner Gourley's motion to receive the petition and refer it to the Zoning Commission for consideration brought the discussion to a close for the time being at least.

The plight of most of the municipal and county governments throughout the state on delinquent taxes has made the officials serving these areas exceedingly tax conscious. As pointed out in this column a week ago the basic trouble in bringing these tax delinquents to task lies in the courts interpretations of the laws as they now stand. While individual cases may be cleared up from time to time by current procedure it is going to take legislative action to provide a permanent cure for the trouble as a whole. State's Attorney Harry Hall in his remarks addressed to the council a short time ago on the subject said there was going to be a meeting held in Chicago in December at which ways and means of alleviating the delinquent tax situation would be thoroughly threshed out.

Commissioner Sharp also came up with a progressive idea on the subject at this same meeting. It was his opinion that this matter could well be the subject for attention by the group of municipal officials of North Shore communities that meets from time to time to discuss mutual problems. If the solution of the delinquent tax problem lies in Springfield it is his opinion that the mere pressure from the greatest number of community water in the fall is tough on the solons in the state capital, the sooner a solution will be reached.

WILSON'S Weekly RECIPES

Lay the stuffed sausage on the broiler, broil until the sausage starts to brown. Place 1/2 pound Wilson's sliced Certified Bacon on the grill, broil five minutes longer.

How does HE like his bacon?

Food that stands by you like a brother! That's what America needs these strenuous days. For a breakfast to start your day, for a lunch with a punch, for a dinner that replenishes your store of energy, nothing excels Wilson's Certified Pure Pork Sausages . . . sweet, juicy, deftly seasoned pork; fragrant to fry, toothsome to taste, chock full of flavor. Make them a "regular" on your shopping list.

BIG LINKS OR LITTLE AND HOW TO USE EACH

Wilson's Certified Pure Pork Sausages come in big or little links or Country Style (a long continuous link).

Here's a good recipe for the "little fellows":

"3 LITTLE PIGS"

Prick, then parboil one pound of Wilson's Certified Sausage (small links). Slice large unpeeled apples one inch thick. Cut a hole in the center and insert sausage. Sprinkle with sugar, broil until brown, turn, sprinkle with sugar and brown.

Stuffed Sausages

Take one pound of Wilson's Certified Sausage (big links—5 to 7 to the pound). Partially split each link and insert any of the following—wedges of unpeeled apples or of canned pineapple, or of parboiled carrots, or cooked and stoned prunes.

Do you consult your lord and master about how he likes his bacon sliced—thick or thin? We did and found that most men like it thicker—fried not too crisp. In fact, most men went for Wilson's Certified Bacon sliced Family Style. Reason—this bacon is sliced slightly thicker, then packed tightly back on the rind as though it had never been sliced. The result is that it holds its flavor longer, has a meatier taste, and lies flatter as it fries.

SOME LIKE IT THIN . . .

If this is you, you can buy Wilson's Certified Bacon—the same delicious cure, sliced in 1/4 or 1-pound cartons or cellophane packs, or you can buy it by the piece and have your dealer slice it—some thick (for the men folks), some thin (for you).

But no matter how you like your bacon sliced, for goodness sake, insist on Wilson's Certified Bacon. Then you get that sweet, rich, but mild cure, and nicely balanced fat and lean.

Rector recommends that to get meats that are "cooler-fresh" you ask for Wilson's new Gela Seald fresh Beef, Lamb and Veal. All their fresh, juicy goodness is sealed in with a coating of pure, crystal-clear, edible gelatine.

See you next week, G. R.
