Library

A few books concerning the countries involved in the Far East struggle, their politics, government and foreign affairs.

"Introducing Australia," by C. Hartley Grattan. Mr. Grattan is America's foremost authority on Australia. A leader in Australian public affairs has said of him: "Broadly speaking I should describe him as the one non-Australian in the world today who is able to speak and write authoritatively on Australian literature, history and economics."

"Australia—official handbook." A publication put out by the Australian government giving facts and figures on Australia's government, commerce, agriculture, recreation, etc.

"Volcanic Isle," by Wilfred Fleisher. Wilfrid Fleisher's father acquired the famous newspaper The Japan Advertiser in 1914. In 1929 Wilfrid Fleisher's thesis in "Volcanic Isle" is that the United States is now in the same position vis-a-vis Japan as France was in 1935, when Hitler invaded the Ruhr. Japan is now in a vulnerable position after four years of war. If she gains access to the valuable raw materials of the southern Pacific region, she will no longer be vulnerable.

"Japan over Asia," by William Henry Chamberlin. First published in 1937 "Japan over Asia" has been revised by Mr. Chamberlin after four years of residence in Tokyo as Chief Far Eastern correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. Mr. Chamberlin has written neither an indictment nor a vindication of Japan's expansion, but has set forth as objectively as possible the main events and causes of the Island Empire's drive in Asia.

"The Development of Japan," by K. S. Latourette. In this fourth edition of Professor Latourette has brought down to date his account of Japan's course in foreign affairs. The Yale Review says of it: "As an introduction to a knowledge of modern Japan, this book supplies the reader with the briefest possible sketch of its past history, from which, however, he is made to realize the true sources of exciting political conditions."

"A History of the Modern and Contemporary Far East," by P. H. Clyde. The author is in the department of history, Duke University, and his book as the subtitle says is "A survey of western contacts with eastern Asia during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries."

Girl Scouts to Hold Defense Institute Feb. 23

Mrs. Carroll A. Bartlett, Training Chairman of the Highland Park Girl Scouts, announces a one-day Defense Institute on February 23rd, at the Winnetka Community House.

All Leaders, Troop Committee members, mothers and anyone interested in Girl Scout work in Evanston, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka, Hubbard Woods, Glencoe and Highland Park are asked to attend. Registration will be at 9:45, and the morning session will open promptly at 10:00 o'clock. Since this is an all-day meeting, every one attending is asked to bring a box lunch, and beverages will be served by the Winnetka Community House.

The Institute will be in charge of Mrs. J. H. Pratt, Regional Chairman.

Community life will be affected by the Defense program and the problem created must be met by community action. The Girl Scout organization is prepared to help solve the youth problem by providing adequate training of young people for Civilian Defense.

Speakers scheduled to take part in this Institute will be announced at a later date.

Voters League Discusses Far East At Round Table

A round table discussion of the Far East, with Dr. Ernest B. Price, head of Chicago International House, as principal speaker and Mrs. Louis Haller as moderator, at 1:30 p. m. Monday, Feb. 23, at the Library Auditorium, will bring to a close the study group on the Far East which the Highland Park League of Women Voters Foreign Policy department has conducted.

Questions which have arisen during the course of study will be brought before Dr. Price for discussion. All members of the class and others who are interested are invited to come. Mrs. Haller, chairman of the local department of Foreign Policy, has directed the study group which has been attended by fifty enthusiastic members.

Dr. Price, who was born in Burma of American parents, is an authority on the Far East and international relations. After receiving a degree from the University of Rochester, studying international law at Columbia university, and receiving a Ph. D from John Hopkins, Dr. Price went to China and became a student interpreter at the Chinese Legation at Peking. Later he was interpreter and vice consul at Foo Chow and Canton. He was Consul at Foo Chow from 1921 to 1929, when he resigned to become President of China Airways and China Air Craft Corp. Returning to this country he taught at Stanford university and the University of Oregon, and then did research at the Walter Hines Page School of International House in 1935. Girls Lead On Semester Honor Roll

The girls lead the boys in the number of names on the first semester honor roll, according to the statistics released by Mr. Pertz yesterday.

There are 66 girls on the first honor roll and 49 on the second, making a total of 115. In contrast, there are 44 boys on the first honor roll and 45 on the second, making a total of 89.

It's interesting to note that among both the boys and girls, the sophomores lead with the greatest number on both honor rolls, followed by the seniors, juniors, and freshmen in the order listed.
