DEERFIELD SALVAGE COMMITTEE TO PLAN JUNK DRIVE

The Salvage committee of West Deerfield Township is planning a junk drive for the week of Sept. 14 to 19. P. P. Stathas and Mrs. Robert L. Johnson, co-chairmen of the salvage committee, have outlined the methods of the drive and the materials needed. The storage place for the junk will be on the O'Connor property east of the railroad and north of Osterman ave. All types of salvage materials will be collected in this drive, which is separate from the weekly tin-can collections. The tin-can drive is a continuous project for the duration and junior commandos will make trips week-in and week-out the entire year to homes not serviced by the garbage service, or householders having garbage service the weekly pick-up will continue.

All-Out Effort

However, the junk drive is an all-out effort to bring in the tons of scrap that lie unnoticed in every one's home or on their property. Presumably these junk drives will be scheduled for several times a year so that residents will continue to save junk.

Chairmen, co-chairmen, and junior commandos of the Salvage committee will be making house to house calls from now until Sept. 14 to impress upon people the necessity of giving scrap materials to the government for the armament program to help win this war.

LAND-BASED AVIATION NEEDED TO WIN THE WAR, SAYS DE SEVERSKY

HOW are we going to win the war? While there is no question in our minds that we are going to win there is tremendous difference of opinion among the military and naval leaders of how it is to be won.

Probably no authority in recent months has created such a furor as has Major Alexander P. de Seversky in his best-seller, "Victory Through Air Power."

In the September issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Major de Seversky again presents his views and charges flatly that "Land-Based Aviation Will Win the War."

Pointing out that Congress has just approved the building of new aircraft carriers, Major de Seversky says, "The aircraft carrier happens to be the most vulnerable vessel afloat. It is doomed as soon as it ventures within the striking radius of land-based aviation."

Continuing, the famous aviator says, "In this war bitter experience has taught us the importance of dispersing airplanes and facilities. We no longer huddle planes and repair shops and supplies in one spot for the convenience of enemy sky raiders. Instead, we scatter them over a large area. But the carrier defies this principle of dispersal. On the contrary, it packs a maximum of aircraft and other equipment in a minimum of space. As a result, it is the answer to a bombardier's dream of a concentrated target."

"If any doubt of the futility of carriers in offensive operations remained, it should have been wiped out by the events of Coral Sea and Midway. Those engagements were played up as 'sea battles' in the official communiques, but they were nothing of the sort. The naval forces never even came into contact. Those were sea battles only in the sense that aviation fought over the sea and that navies provided the targets."

"Practically all the aircraft carriers mixed up in the operations were sunk or crippled. We lost the Lexington and the Japs lost at least four, perhaps five, of their carriers. The tragic helplessness of this sort of vessel—exposed to assault horizontally, above and below—was exhibited as if in a laboratory experiment."

"The fact is that the epoch of naval offensives is ended. War has resolved into a struggle for mastery of the skies. Air power has taken the lead. Surface forces are either reduced to auxiliaries or entirely immobilized until the issue of who controls the air is decided. Until we take this fact to heart, we shall blunder from disaster to disaster. We must recognize that there has been a revolution in war-making due to the advent of the air-weapon. None of our traditional strategy applies, because it was a two-dimensional strategy, whereas air power has yanked warfare into the third dimension."

"We can and we will win this war—provided we face the fact that this is primarily an aerial war and proceed to develop the strategy and the aircraft to win it. In the final analysis, that means long-range, hard-hitting aviation based on land. It means air power capable of carrying an offensive across water directly to the source of the enemy's power—to his home land."

"By reversing the process, by using powerful land-based aviation, we can conceivably turn back recent Pacific history and retrieve the last territories, island by island. That, we may judge from the kind of preparations now under way, is what United Nations strategy proposes to do."

"The logic of these elementary truths must be hammered home until our nation realizes that our war effort must be revised, with aviation as its decisive element. Only then will we begin to channel the main part of our national wealth and skills, labor power and materials, to the creation of an irresistible force of land-based air power."

"The waste involved in a construction program on irrelevant types of weapons would not be serious if we could afford it. But we can't. We are reaching the point of industrial saturation when we no longer care to indulge in the extravagance of building anything and everything that comes to mind. We must concentrate on the weapons essential for decisive offensive. That means, in the first place, long-range, land-based aviation."
