"Fly for the Navy"

Men with private pilot licenses and as few as 50 solo hours may now become commissioned instructors in the Navy Air Force. This lowering of the number of required solo hours from 80 to 50 was announced today by the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board in Chicago where application for these ratings are accepted. Success of the "Fly for Navy" drive now under way in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin—which has seen 1,500 Navy air cadets enlisted in August and September already—and high enlistment figures throughout the country make it necessary that the Navy obtain hundreds of competent new instructors at once. Men eligible for air cadet training, however, will not be accepted under the instructor program.

The liberalized plan allows pilots with 50 or more hours of solo to be commissioned immediately as ensigns and to be given the eight-week Civilian Pilot training course that consists of advanced ground school and flying in aircraft rated over 100 horsepower. While taking this course the officer trainees will receive an ensign's pay of $150 a month, plus subsistence, board and equipment expense. Applicants must be 18 through 33 years of age, high school graduates and citizens of at least 10 years standing.

Most of those successfully completing the CPT course will be sent to the Navy's giant air station at Pensacola, Florida for three months of advanced Navy training, followed by assignments as primary flight instructors at a Naval Reserve Aviation Base. CPT training in link instruments and a flight officer course with related assignment upon graduation will go to a small number of the CPT graduates.

A flight check given by a CPT operator and a Navy physical examination which compares with the CAA commercial physical test must be passed by all applicants.

Flight pay—50 per cent of base pay—and a permanent officer rank based on age and proficiency as an instructor trainee are given the officer trainee upon entering the Pensacola training.

Short OCD Training Program for Deerfield

The Deerfield OCD Office this week announced the completion of plans for a shortened training program for the workers and civilians of the Village. Formerly, several nights were required for the completion of courses given for OCD credit. Under a new program approved by the National OCD Council, courses may now be given in which work can be completed in one evening. It is felt that such a program will make it much more possible for all workers, and others in the community who are interested, to take the required work.

The "short course" program has been made possible by new plans adopted, and with the elimination of overlapping materials between courses. New booklets, films, charts and demonstration materials have been obtained for use in the classes. It will not be possible for booklets to be given without charge to all persons enrolled. Deerfield is adopting the new training program in line with the request from the National Office that all training work be speeded up and local defense units perfected. A large enrollment of local workers is expected.

National OCD rulings require that all Civilian Defense Workers, in order to be certified and given insignia, complete three "general courses," at least ten hours of first aid, and the "advanced course" for their part of the service. The following is the schedule of courses to be given in the fall training period

Basic Course—Thurs., Oct. 1, 8:00; School: instructor, Lester B. Ball.

After a preliminary test, the War department decreed today a strictly cash policy for all soldiers at army posts in the continental United States. Secretary Stimson announced the new order which abolishes credit privileges for personal purchases enjoyed by soldiers for decades.

The department said the new policy would save bookkeeping. Further efforts to reduce credit buying and expressed belief also it would "inculcate the habit of thrift in the soldier."

The order becomes effective Nov. 1 at all army posts in the nited States except Alaska. Local commanders will decide whether to apply it at posts abroad. The preliminary test has been in progress at Fort Bragg, N. C., since Aug. 1.

The Deerfield OCD is particularly anxious that new volunteers for OCD work be obtained this fall. In line with this, the three "general courses" are open to the public. It is especially stressed that it is important that women take part in the classes due to the fact that civilian defense duties will fall largely on their shoulders during the day. The local civilian defense council would like to have at least one person from each family enrolled in the courses.

Bulletins are being mailed this week to all homes in Deerfield covering the training program. Enrollment cards are available from the Air Raid Wardens, or enrollment may be made by calling the Deerfield Grammar School.
