Monarch Finer Foods Inaugurates 90th Anniversary

The history of Reid, Murdoch & Co. is one of the conspicuous romances of American business. More than ten years before the first transcontinental railroad had spanned this country, Simon Reid and Thomas Murdoch had opened a business on the banks of the Mississippi, provisioning hardy pioneers for their perilous covered-wagon journey across the plains.

Sensing the growing importance of Chicago they moved their business to that bustling western trading post. It thrived. From a little wholesale grocery, Reid, Murdoch & Co. has grown until it now serves the nation through factories located at Chicago, West Chicago, Rochester, Minn., Ellsworth, Mich., Pierceton, Ind., South Whitley, Ind., Chippewa Falls, Wis., Salem Oregon; Sales offices and branches at Chicago Pittsburgh, Boston, Jacksonville, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Baltimore, St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland, Indianapolis and Toledo. Werahouse stocks are carried at a hundred odd additional points throughout the country.

Previous to 1922 Reid, Murdoch & Co. was engaged in a general jobbing business. The year 1922 marked the beginning of a truly remarkable expansion. From the usual, if large, wholesale grocery house, Reid, Murdoch & Co. changed to Canners, Manufacturers and Distributors of its own brands of foods only. National advertising was inaugurated, and has been continued since, without a break. The first of its several divisions was established, and its manufacturing facilities greatly increased. And today the great majority of all foods sold under the Monarch Label are the products of Monarch's own farms and factories.

Take a tip from our fighting men and "Be watchful for danger" is the theme of the November safety poster currently being distributed to 38,000 classrooms in the Chicago Motor Club territory in Illinois and Indiana. Safety authorities stress safety education in the schools because they can reach a large percentage of the population through school children. The November poster warns against carelessness at unprotected intersections, where many pedestrian injuries and fatalities take place.

Education Week Is Nov. 8-14

"Education for Free Men" is the timely theme for the observance of American Education Week, November 8-14, as America gives special thought to the significance of public schools and libraries in a world at war.

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes who is State librarian today called attention to the part that active, well-supported local libraries in all parts of the State are playing in keeping citizens informed on the war effort.

Public Libraries are no longer mere store-houses of books; they are active forces for education in their communities. Many public libraries not only provide up-to-date books on almost every subject, but they serve as war information centers, they sponsor forums, radio programs, adult schools and in many cases serve as headquarters for Red Cross activities and even recruiting offices.

The schools equip our children to read and instill in them an appreciation for education. It is up to the public library in every community to sustain this interest through adult life by providing a reservoir of good books and other reading material.

Secretary Hughes urged that citizens take full advantage of the many services offered by their public library; that they take time out from their busy lives this week to visit their local library, to see how it can help them in giving their best for their country.

The Illinois State Library, Springfield, will serve persons in any section of the State who do not have the advantage of a public library. The only charge is for transportation of books to and from Springfield. The State Library also supplements existing libraries that have limited book collections.

Feeding family for Health and Strength is simple with this plan

says Dorothy Greig

Baked Chicken Leaf with Chicken Gravy is main dish for well balanced meal.

ONCE you get the hang of it, it's easy to plan the kind of meals that make your family strong and vital. The plan is this:

A quart of milk every day for each child—a pint for each grown-up. That counts in the milk used in cooking, for soups, custards and so on, as well as that served over cereal and fruits, and the milk you drink.

At least three or four eggs a week for everybody. Here again include the eggs used in cooking.

Tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit or raw cabbage or salad greens—every day serve at least one of these. A big glassful of tomato juice for breakfast, for instance, is one way to supply this requirement.

Meat, poultry or fish every day. Well, dinner takes care of that item.

Whole grain products. That's your morning cereal, whole wheat and enriched white breads.

Vegetables and fruits. Eat them raw, eat them cooked. But serve them in abundance and every day. Butter (or enriched margarine) is a daily must, too.

Easy, isn't it? These are the grand foods we all enjoy. When they are included in the day's meals we can forget about vitamins, minerals, proteins and the like—because we'll be getting them.

- Health Building Dinner
- Tomato Juice Cocktail
- Hot Chicken Leaf with Chicken Gravy

Green Peas Closed Sweet Potatoes with Apples Bran Raisin Muffins Peach Cream Pie Coffee—Milk

The baked chicken leaf has fine savory flavor and notice that it calls for milk and eggs:

- *Baked Chicken Leaf with Chicken Gravy
- 2 cans condensed chicken soup
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1/2 cups ground chicken
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs (lightly toasted)
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs

Strain the chicken soup and save the broth for gravy. Cook the onions in butter until soft, but not brown. Then combine onions, ground chicken, toasted bread crumbs, chicken and rice (strained from the soup) seasonings, milk and eggs; then mix well. Put into a buttered loaf pan (8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2") and bake in a moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Serves approximately 6.

Chicken Gravy:

- 3 tablespoons chicken fat or butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 1/2 cups chicken broth (strained from chicken soup)

Melt the fat in a pan, add flour and cook until frothy. Then add chicken broth and cook until thickened. Makes approximately 1 1/2 cups gravy.

Junior Commandos In Deerfield Now Pick Up Tin Cans

The office of civilian defense of the village of Deerfield has issued this notice to all households serviced by Fritsch brothers garbage service: "Have your tin cans washed and folded and in bags or other containers so that junior commandos can pick them up Saturday morning. The commandos will take them to a central place in each city block and the village truck, under the supervision of William D. Johnston, will see that they are collected and taken to the depository in the old Knaak garage on Deerfield road."

In explanation of this order, it is stated that Fritsch brothers have turned in their key to the garage to P. P. Stathas, head of the salvage committee, and because they have too much work, are not cooperating with the local office of civilian defense, and will no longer collect the prepared tin cans.

In cities of 25,000 population and over, it is mandatory that garbage collectors pick up the prepared tin cans for salvage and there is a penalty for all who fail to obey this war time mandate. However, it does not as yet affect small communities, such as Deerfield.

Former Sheridan Commander In African Fight

One of the former commanders at Fort Sheridan, Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, is in command of the landing forces at Oran west of Algiers, it has been announced by the War department.

Gen. Fredendall was in command at Sheridan from July to October, 1940, and until last August he was stationed with the Eleventh Army corps in Chicago. While he was in command here, he was promoted from a brigadier to a major general.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1907 and served in the Philippines and in France during the last World War. In France he was in command of the infantry school. He was first stationed at Fort Sheridan in 1912, and lived at that time in Highland Park. After leaving Fort Sheridan in 1940 he was appointed commander of the Fourth division at Fort Benning, Ga.

When It's Wash Day In The Army

Private Aaron Asofsky, Private Anthony Pizzuli, and Private Edward Wendelkin can't quite decide whether it's a pair of shorts or part of a shirt. It's probably a prank of Fort Dix's laundry, but the boys seem to be getting a kick out of it. There's no "klick" but there's plenty of food value in the milk they're knocking off—and no germs, for the bottles are protected by sanitary paper cover caps.

VETERANS—You men who fought the last War—make this your job. To see that no American boy shall fall because a lack of scrap deprived him of a fighting chance.

SCRAP SLACKERS CAN LOSE THIS WAR!

It's squarely up to you. The mills need scrap to make the steel to go across the sea as ships, and tanks, and guns. They need it now—and in the months to come. For all new steel must be 50% scrap—and the mills are running out. They haven't enough for even 30 days more production—then they'll be shutting down.

Unless you get to work. Unless you go into your basement and your attic and rout out the junk that's there. Talk about it to your friends and neighbors—you men who know what war is like. Tell them... "Don't be a scrap slacker. Get your scrap ready for the drive that starts next Monday!" Then get to work and help them do it.

We're out to fill the junk yards—to make every salvage depot a towering tribute to our fighting men. And don't think the job is done when the scrap starts piling up. Because the war must end before the need for scrap is over.

Do this to help make sure it ends our way!
