

National Voter's League Issue Bulletin On Trade Agreements

How Congressional decisions on continuing the trade policy of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements program will test our country's promises to develop international trade as the foundation of post-war economic structure, set forth in a bulletin just issued to members of the National League of Women Voters in 1,500 communities.

According to Dr. Kathryn Trimmer Abbey, author, historian, and foreign policy chairman of the Florida League of Women Voters, it is a "trick of fate" that legislation re-enacting the Reciprocal Trade Agreements program will come before Congress at the time of the first U.S. military offensive.

"Let none of us be so blind that we refuse to connect these two events or fail to realize that the eyes of the world will be fixed as intently on our congressmen as on our soldiers," she said. "A telling victory in Africa could be frustrated and undermined if the U.S. by rejecting reciprocal trade principles, announced to her allies that she was still unwilling to accept the realities of economics and to stand shoulder to shoulder with her partners in the regeneration of civilization."

Post-War Era

Pointing out that in the midst of war the American people are required to take their first step toward laying the foundation of the post-war era, she declared: "All nations have admitted that future international relations must rest on the acceptance of economic interdependence. Also there is general agreement that the catastrophe of this war and the chaos preceding it were largely created by the narrowness of the theories of economic nationalism while economic processes were obviously global. Whatever promises the United Nations have made to each other and to the world, they have all included pledges to work for international development of trade and industry as the only permanent rock on which to rebuild post-war social structure."

Oak Terrace Upper Grades To Present Indian Operetta

The seventh and eighth grades of the Terrace school in Highwood will present an Indian operetta, "Dawn Boy," in the auditorium of the school on Friday evening, Feb. 5.

The story of the play centers around the fact that an Indian tribe has suffered as a result of a long-continued drought. The people of the tribe fear that the Rain God is angry, and so they make plans to send one of the tribe to intercede with him. Dawn Boy, a young brave, volunteers to go. After many hardships he arrives at the home of the Rain God. The Rain God appears and tells Dawn Boy the reason he has withdrawn his favor from the tribe. However, because of Dawn Boy's courage he promises forgiveness and the blessing of rain upon the fulfillment of certain conditions.

Dawn Boy returns to his tribe and helps fulfill the Rain God's requirements.

Leading characters of the operetta are Dawn Boy, sung and played by Enzo Nannini; See-All—Rory Shero, Storm Dancer—Norma Lenzini, Silver Dew—Bernadine Booth, Rain God—John Cassal.

Tickets may be purchased from any 7th or 8th grader of the school or at the door on Friday evening.

Boys Interested In Marine Corps Offered College Education

A college or university education at the expense of the U. S. marine corps was offered today to Illinois 17-year-old high school seniors of the June, 1943, graduating class.

The plan was designed to further the educational needs of America's young men at schools of their own choice and to provide material for the U. S. marines.

One requirement is absolutely necessary—applicants must stand scholastically in the upper two-thirds of their class.

As explained by Captain Paul B. Rickard, USMC, of the U. S. Marine Corps Officer Procurement office in the Board of Trade building, Chicago, the plan works in this fashion:

Can Enlist

"Young men of 17 with good scholastic records can enlist in the U. S. marine corps upon graduation from high school," Captain Rickard said. "They will be sent to a college or university of their own selection and upon graduation and further military training commissioned second lieutenants in the marines."

"In the event the government needs men before graduation, and all other requirements are met, they will be sent to the marine corps candidate school where they may work toward commissions as second lieutenants."

Civilian Defense News

Plans have been completed for the new ten-hour first aid course to be given under the supervision of Mr. "X." This condensed course has been planned to give the members of the protective services an opportunity to obtain their civilian Defense credit in first aid in four weekly sessions of two and a half hours each. The general public is also urged to take advantage of this free instruction.

Classes will begin the week of February first and each class will be repeated on the first four nights of the week so as to give enrollees a flexible schedule. The Monday night classes will be conducted at the Community center, Tuesday at Lincoln school Wednesday at Highland Park high school, and Thursday at Ravinia school, in each case from 7:30 to 10 o'clock.

Mr. "X" has announced that the Monday night class will continue for another four weeks after the completion of the ten-hour course so as to their own land may get in touch with above district captains and register for the season of 1943.

The next Victory Garden meeting will be held at the Community center Monday evening, Feb. 15, at 8 o'clock.

DESIGNED FOR PEACE

Commissioned in War - NOW

VETERANS ON THE TRANSPORTATION FRONT

"North Western's" Famous "400" Streamliner Fleet

Just a year has passed since the "400" Streamliner Fleet began service. Now, as we pause to mark its first year, it seems presentient that these trim, diesel-powered trains should have been ready for service at that time. For war had come and fighting forces were on the move. "North Western" marshalled its trains for active duty . . . and the new "400" trains were among the foremost.

Thus, in its brief career the "400" Fleet has taken a definite part in the War Program. Though built to serve a nation at peace, these trains are now doing a far more important job in serving a nation at war. Fighting men on the move, civilians in war work, travelers on urgent business—thousands have discovered the "400s" are indispensable units in the Transportation Army.

The significance of this first year of their service is not the fact that a group of new trains has been in existence for twelve months. It is that the new "400" Streamliners have meant additional transportation for Uncle Sam; that the new diesel-powered units already have behind them a million miles of service; finally, that each of these power units and each of these trains shall continue to carry on in the cause of Freedom.

In war as in peace "North Western" serves America. The "400" Streamliners now enter their second year of active duty on the Transportation Front—and do so proudly. Our ability to keep them performing maximum service depends upon our success in obtaining an adequate supply of materials to keep them in perfect repair.
