I'M IN THE ARMY NOW

By
PVT. WHITT N. SCHULTZ

What to Say?

At Headquarters, Chicago Schools, Army Air Forces Technical Training Command, Feb. 24.—(Passed by a military censor)—

The place?
A church dinner.
The time?
Last week end.
He was just a little tow-headed fellow dressed in a sailor suit. He couldn't have been over 5. And he had those big, wide, clear, sparkling eyes of a clean-cut youth.

Wondering . . .

I noticed that he was watching me closely. Finally, with shyness in his manner, he came to me. He looked up with those large, blue, youthful eyes and said:

"Hello. You're a soldier, aren't you?"

"Yes."

He paused, shuffled his feet, looked down at them, and then looked into my eyes and said:

"How many Japs have you killed?"

First I was amazed. Then I laughed. And then I had a funny feeling all over.

Creating

How could I answer him? What could I say?

I tried to change the subject from killing, to creating, to building, to improving. I tried to ask him if he was going to school. If he liked school. And all the other questions one usually asks of a child.

But the chap was persistent. "We've got to kill all the Japs, don't we, Soldier?"

I was still trying to answer him when his father came, smiled and said:

"Come, Bobbie. We must go home now."

"Goodbye, Soldier. Hope you kill a lot of Japs!"

Goodbye.
And he was gone—but the memory of what he said lingered in my mind.

Christianity
For years as Christians we've been taught to love, honor and respect our fellowmen. One of the Ten Commandments—the fifth—sternly states: "THOU SHALT NOT KILL."

But wars alter faiths and change ideals.

Wondering how I could answer the questions shot into my mind by the lad, I went to the Army chaplain.

Army chaplains are playing a vital role in this war. Their faith, their courage, their ability to inspire and raise hopes of those who are fighting in the greatest of all battles is magnificent.

Knowing how a minister can put a mind at rest and instill mental contentment, I asked the Army chaplain how he felt about war and about killing. I thought his answer eloquently simple yet deep and penetrating.

He replies
"War is terrible! Rotten! No one likes a war. But now it's here and we're deeply entrenched in it. So, what to do? Well, here's what I've decided in my own mind. Hitler and his companions are like a dreadful disease that grows and eats away the body. Like surgeons, we of the Allied forces must cut out this growth, this constantly-spreading infection, and kill it for all time."

That's all.
Think that over, Highland Parkers.

John D. Kilian Honored At Illinois

John D. Kilian, son of Mrs. James A. Kilian of 682 Yale lane and Col. Kilian who is serving overseas, has been honored at the University of Illinois for being the second year basic course cadet most proficient in the essential training of the cavalry unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

In recognition of his proficiency, he has been awarded a citation from Scabbard and Blade, national military organization. One cadet from each of the six units of the University ROTC was selected for this honor.

The University of Illinois ROTC is the largest of any non-military school in the nation. Military training has been compulsory for men students at the University ever since it opened 75 years ago under terms of the Morrill Land Grant college act.

Since the World War, the military training has been given by the ROTC under officers of the Army of the United States. Two years of basic training are required of all men students. An optional two-year advanced course leads to an Army commission.

Some 4,000 University of Illinois graduates have been commissioned in the Army from the advanced course. Many others now are Army officers because their basic ROTC instruction helped them to earn commissions at Army Officer Candidate schools.

Down the ways goes a new Tank Landing Ship to join America's Navy. Following modern mass-production methods, this vessel was constructed in sections which were electrically welded together at the launching ways.

Ship Building and Electric Power in Northern Illinois

In time of war, as in peace, electricity is the power of industrial activity, the force that speeds production.

Here, in this great center of war production, every hour of the day electric power is helping to build ships, tanks, planes and hundreds of other implements essential to victory on the land, on the sea and in the air.

Day and night, it is our responsibility to supply electric power for war production in this area. And to this task we are devoting the skill and efficiency attained through years of experience.

At another ship building plant in the Chicago area a Naval Patrol Vessel is built in sections which are fitted and welded together.

Electric arc welding speeds the fabricating of sub-assemblies as well as the joining of large component sections of Patrol Vessels.
