TOM CLARK

A mile and a half every four minutes

Did you know that a machine gun in action for four minutes uses enough copper for a mile and a half of telephone wire?

It's a fact! And one which helps to explain why we can't install new equipment to handle all your telephone calls as promptly as we'd like to do. Copper and nickel and rubber and many other scarce materials have gone off to fight America's hattles - and win the war.

Telephone service to civilians canno possibly be "service as usual" in time of war. Today, Long Distance circuits are crowded to the limit at times . . . calls to some cities are often delayed . . , new residence extension telephones are no longer available . . . in many cases, we must give new subscribers party line service in order to stretch facilities as far as they will go.

Even so, most telephone users accept necessary restrictions with understanding. We thank you for your co-operation.
