H. P. Public Library

Next to the corner drug store in Ravinia, there is a cubbyhole which is making a name for itself as a branch of the Highland Park public library. In these days of tire and gas saving, and sultry heat one appreciates a means of escape from becoming foot sore and weary. The library is conveniently located, enough so to be included in the list of errands for Wednesdays and Saturdays, the two days of the week which it is open. The hours are: 10-12 and 1-5:30, whatever the weather.

Once inside, old friends like John Galsworthy, Edna Ferber, Pearl Buck, John Steinbeck, Kathleen Norris, Upton Sinclair and Franz Werfel invite one to investigate the realms of their imagination.

New books have found a place on the shelf too; some of the authors being familiar, while new names await the chance to make their acquaintance known. The reader who heads straight for the shelf of mysteries will enjoy:

Case of the Absent-minded Professor (Stein).

Tunnel From Calais (Rame).
Case of the Buried Clock (Gardner).

Satan Has Six Fingers (Kelsey).

For the housewife who prefers something light and modern yet not a depressing war story Yesterday's Children by Lamar Warrick, Evergreen House by Louise P. Hauck, The Merrivales by Alice R. Colver, and The Pine Tree Shield by E. C. Flint will prove entertaining.

Other new additions in fiction include Iola Fuller's Shining Trail, Alfred L. Crabb's Supper at the Maxwell House, E. M. DeLafield's Late And Soon, Patricia Wentworth's Chinese Shawl, Demetra Vaka's Delarab, William Saroyan's Human Comedy, Marcia Davenport's Valley of Decision, Sinclair Lewis' Gideon Planish, and Lloyd Douglas' The Robe.

Non-Fiction Titles
Among the newest non-fiction titles and authors which confront one are found on lists of what people are reading nowadays here, there, and everywhere:

Journey Among Warriors—Eve Curie.

One World—Wendell L. Willkie.
Guadalcanal Diary—Richard Tregaskas.

On Being a Real Person—Harry E. Fosdick.

George Washington Carver—Holt.
Seven Came Through—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker.

Then, too, there are books for followers of the fine arts: Copland's What to Listen For in Music, Ewen's Book of Modern Composers, Spaeth's Art of Enjoying Music, Chene's A World History of Art, and Craven's Modern Art; the Men, the Movements, the Meaning.

Home-making and good housekeeping are full-time jobs today for the WIVES; perhaps the following books will be helpful with suggestions for keeping everyone and everything happy and healthy.

Mrs. Appleyard's Kitchen—L. A. Kent.

A Home of Your Own and How to Run It—H. Ripberger.

What Do We Eat Now? (a guide to wartime cooking)—H. Robertson.
Maidercraft; a Guide for the One-maid Household—L. Price.

First Aid for the Ailing House—R. B. Whitman.

Complete Guide to Modern Knitting and Crocheting—A. Carroll.
Color Schemes for the Home and Modern Interiors—Frohne.

How to Be Your Own Decorator—Koues.

Home Decorations With Fabric and Thread—Spears.

Last, and least in size, approximately fifty books have been ordered for the tiny tots who visit the library with mother and want something, too.

Annual Writer's Conference Plans Twelve Contests

Writers of poetry, fiction, magazine features, radio plays, and material for children, have an opportunity to win $400 in cash awards, plus royalties and publication, in twelve contests offered through the 4th Annual Writers' conference of the midwest, to be held July 28-31 at Northwestern university, Evanston.

The largest cash award is a $50 first prize for a 4000 word story with an immigrant or second generation theme offered by the Polish Arts club of Chicago. In addition to these prizes contestants have the opportunity of having their "First Nighter" radio scripts chosen for outright purchase at $100. For some 2500 word story winner there is also an award of a scholarship in a fall fiction course at the Medill school of journalism of Northwestern university, either on the Chicago or Evanston campus.

Monetary rewards are secondary to professional opportunity in all contests for among the judges are several who regularly buy free lance material. Thus not only prize winners but any entries showing promise can receive publishers' recognition. All contests close July 15, but non-contest material can be offered for workshop criticism as late as July 20.

For additional information concerning these awards and others a stamped self-addressed envelope should be sent to the 4th Annual Writers' Conference, Medill school of journalism, Northwestern university, Evanston.

Community Recreation Program Listed in Year Book

Highland Park's community recreation program is among those listed in the annual Recreation Year Book for 1942 just published by the National Recreation Association in New York City. This national report contains detailed information on the public recreation programs in almost 1,100 communities.

In the first year of war hundreds of community recreation agencies adjusted their programs to meet the needs of men in uniform and war workers, according to the Year Book figures. The number of volunteer leaders was upped to the record total of 14,500 because of the widespread demand for men and women to help with recreation programs for children, young people and adults.

The Year Book figures show that on the whole, in spite of various difficulties, the community recreation movement held its own during the first year of American participation in the war.
