

DEEPS and SHALLOWS

A WILFUL WOMAN

For Lady Spring's frivolity We have to claim Our share of blame. With seasonal idolatry We gave her immortality.

THE BARRED SEVEN

Chapter VII

I got downstairs just as Hilda came to the back door. She set down her bags and stood, panting a little.

Creative Writers Offer Substantial Award for Winner

One hundred dollars cash, rather than the fifty dollar award first planned for a short story by the North Shore Creative Writers will be offered at the Fifty Annual Writers' conference at Northwestern University this July.

Various cooperative creative projects have contributed to the total. Orders for autographed copies of Rowena Bennett's new book "Runner for the King," the auction of an original painting by Hazel Crow Ewell suggesting a setting for a story, home cooked luncheons with artistic table decorations, have been the main sources of the prize money.

In addition to the group prize, special awards were announced by three individual members: Mrs. O. L. Olesen for manuscripts showing talent in the Fiction Workshop; Mildred Haessler for good work in the Writing for Children Workshop, and Mrs. Donald McGibeny for entries in prose and poetry by previous prize winners.

Mrs. Charles Rodgers became the fourth member of the informal "board" to serve for next year when Mrs. Bowden and Mrs. McGibeny were re-elected co-chairmen and Mildred Haessler, treasurer. Plans are already being made for the seventh year's opening of the group next October.

Among Highland Parkers attending the "last day of school" were Mrs. Ernest Sundell, Mrs. Arthur Raff, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. Richard Seitz, Miss Alberta Swift, Miss Miriam Steevers, Mrs. Jane Silberman, Mrs. R. G. Maus, Mrs. Florence Newton, Mrs. L. A. Hine, Mrs. Fred Giesecke, Miss Laura Cross.

Uptown Players to Produce Comedy By Local Woman Author

A comedy, entitled "What Shall It Profit," written by Mrs. Fred Giesecke, 913 Ridgewood Drive, under the pen name of Monica Caldwell, will be staged by James Bradley Griffen, director of the Uptown Players at their theater at 1219 No. LaSalle St., Chicago, starting Friday, May 5, and continuing thereafter, on Friday and Saturday nights, indefinitely.

This is not Mrs. Giesecke's debut as an author. Her play called "Caprice" has been produced by David B. Itkin of the Goodman Theater, Chicago, and a radio skit, written in collaboration with Mrs. Helen B. Froehlich (Helen Kerr), 620 Delta Road, called "Rooms and Romance For Rent" was heard over the air last December on a First Nighter program. Another radio production by this team will soon be released.

spread was in place, without a wrinkle. Puzzled, I opened his wardrobe, averting my nose from the smell of the crystals that I kept there so that the moths could not pasture unmolested; I liked to look inside periodically; the sight of George's suits, the gay hound's tooth check at the head of the row, always heartened me. But the checkered suit was gone, and in its place hung his tan gabardine, limp and wrinkled!

Spring Luncheon of Ravinia Women May 10

A buffet luncheon at 12:30, followed by the annual club business meeting and a review by Mrs. Milton H. Youngren of one of the outstanding books of this World War, John Gunther's "D Day—What Preceded It; What Followed," will provide a full program for the spring luncheon meeting of the Ravinia Women's club next Wednesday, May 10.
