I DO NOT FEAR THE STRONG

I do not fear the strong, the self-sustained... For they find fields that need a constant care.

SOMETHING SHE FORGOT

Mary put a clean lace collar in the neck of her gray dress. It being October, she could wear her last year's hat with the velvet flowers.

Mary had arisen extra early that morning, milked the cows, harnessed the horse, fed the chickens, eaten her breakfast, and now was getting dressed.

Bill Crowley, who was known to be the biggest grouch anywhere for miles around, was leaning against the side of the horse frame leading into the stable.

"Going to town, Mary?" "Yes; how soon does the next train go?"

"About fifteen minutes." "I'll have to hurry, you seem to be feeling pretty good. Glad to see you smiling. Any special news?"

"None," answered Bill, getting around the other side of the buggy. The ticket agent started to say something, but he turned his back and got busy with something on the floor.

She reached the insurance office. Mr. McGinnis had a grin on his face, such as she had never seen before.

He told her he was glad she was early, as he had a meeting in a few minutes. He went behind a partition and when he came out he sat down at his desk and wrote out a receipt before Mary had time to get the money out of her bag.

Mary got the next car for the Northwestern depot, and the conductor kept looking at her, and every time he came through the car, he stopped at her seat, and she half expected him to say something to her.

When the waitress brought Mary's check she asked, "Are you coming into the city, or are you going home?" "Going home, and glad to get out of the city. You're tired, aren't you?"

"I'm glad you are homeward bound," she thanked Mary for the tip and patted her on the shoulder. The railroad conductor was the same one she came in with. There were very few passengers, but he grabbed her ticket and rushed away.

Fanny opened the pasture gate, got the key from under the back step, opened the door, poured some kerosene over the already laid kindling, applied a match and put the kettle on. A cup of hot tea would taste good.

Reaching home, Mary unharnessed

A cup of hot tea would taste good. She took off her coat and then her hat, and was about to drop it in the box, when something white caught her eye, and she saw what she had forgotten. It was that darn lower plate. There it was wedged securely around the perky velvet flower on her hat, with the teeth to the outside.

U. S. Marines Go To Movies

The rain fell in tropical prodigality, at times curtailing visibility.

Those misshapen lumps huddled in the darkness were men, wet and uncomfortable under ponchos or shelter halves, crouched on haunches, or perched on rickety boxes. It was the Marines' evening movie show at Guadalcanal.

"If anybody told me, two years ago, that I'd do this, I'd've called him a liar," muttered one sodden Marine private, but the men were all too stubborn to allow a mere storm to rob them of the major entertainment afforded them. No one moved.

Ceiling prices have been established by OPA on watermelons, alfalfa hay, sweet peppers and hot-house cucumbers, none of which had been under nationwide retail price control. Retail watermelon prices should decline substantially from last summer's figures. Alfalfa producers per ton ceiling prices range from $19 to $26.50. Ceilings on sweet peppers and hot-house cucumbers represent reductions at retail. OPA also has set maximum prices for the 1944 crop of red and black raspberries, dewberries and blackberries.

How to Be Warm Next Winter You can make scarce fuel go further next winter by preparing your home for winter now, be you owner or merely a lease-holder, the Federal Housing administration says; an FHA title loan will enable you to borrow enough to pay for both materials and workmanship needed to insulate your home, to repair your heating plant, to install storm windows—up to as much as $2,500. You can borrow enough for any or all of these things without down payment, without security and with three years in which to pay, FHA says. Get best prices on jobs you want done, then get your local dealer or contractor to tell you where you can get an FHA title loan to cover the entire bill.

Some Foods Again Rationed The OPA has restored rationing to best cuts of lamb in order to get better distribution among customers, and it has restored point values to certain types of cheese and canned asparagus, peas and tomatoes, which were unrationed for two weeks because of large stocks on hand.

UP TO NOW

A possible touch of nostalgia for the "good old days" was the only casualty of Highland Park's "fire-crackerless Fourth."

The efficacy of the statewide ban on the sale of fireworks was reflected here in the fact that Highland Park police had not a single report of an accident arising from the use of fireworks. The "good old days" of cannon crackers, roman candles and skyrocketers did have their good points. The kids, arising at the crack of dawn to start the annual bombardment were in a sort of pyrotechnic seventh heaven and Dad was motivated as much by a desire to join in the fun as by anything else when he insisted that some of the crackers were "too big" for Junior to handle. However the annual toll in blinded and maimed victims more than offset the pleasure that the fireworks afforded.

Highland Park was singularly quiet on the Fourth this year, although there were a few scattered bangs, some of them possibly originating from fireworks purchased at a stand on Skokie boulevard, between County Line and Dunwoody roads (in Cook county) which operated openly despite the state-wide prohibition. As far as can be determined, any fireworks sold in Lake county were sold "undercover," as the ban was rigorously enforced here—a tribute to the law-enforcing agencies throughout the county.

However, for many Highland Parkers—serving overseas—this probably was one of the noisiest Fourth's they had ever experienced, and their absence was a major factor in sobering the spirit of celebration here.
