

DEEPS and SHALLOWS

THE BARRED SEVEN Chapter II

George's interruption was a relief. "I've got to make that next train! Roger, you're leaving anyway, won't you drive me over? You don't mind, do you?" he added, with an impish grin at Reddigan.

Ens. Daniel Whitney Marries Chicago Girl

Last Wednesday, July 19, the Howes Memorial Chapel at Northwestern university was the scene of the wedding of Miss Patricia Busby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Busby, 2656 Morse Ave., Chicago, and Ensign Daniel Rockefeller Whitney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Whitney of Highland Park.

A small group, composed largely of relatives, gathered at 8:30 o'clock for the informal but impressive version of the double ring service which was read by a fellow student of the university, Paul Seto, presided over by a professor at Garrett Biblical Institute.

Mrs. Edward O'Reilly, the former Patricia Palmer, of Chicago, was matron of honor, and Robert Paulin, of Detroit, a naval reserve student at Northwestern university, was best man.

A brief reception followed the ceremony, on the front terrace of the chapel. The bride's uncle, Commander Norval Richardson, flew his plane from Washington for the wedding, and another uncle and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Busby, came from Detroit.

Shortly after the wedding Ensign and Mrs. Whitney left for Coronado, Calif., where he will be stationed for some weeks.

THE MARINES HAVE LANDED

By T/Sgt. Mason Brunson (Marine Corps Combat Correspondent) Saipan, Marianas Islands (Delayed) — Japanese resistance so far has been as stubborn as the fight the Japs put up at Tarawa, but as this is written, in a fox-hole cut into a sand dune facing the western shore from which our ships of all types are in plain view, Marines are working their way steadily inward, pushing the Japs farther into the hills that form the backbone of this island.

In the early hours this morning, the Japs made a desperate counter-attack, rushing down from the hills to the newly constructed air strip which is some 50 yards inland on the western side of the island, but they were thrust back in their attempt to break through the Marine lines.

The big naval guns flash as our warships pour high explosive shells into the Jap forces in the hills. The shells make an awful racket as they sail overhead and many a man ducks instinctively.

Overhead, our planes are providing a comfortable umbrella against Japanese air attacks which, fortunately, have not yet developed. Our planes are pouring rockets into the hills. These rockets create a shrill, screaming sound which adds another eerie note to the many weird noises of battle.

Just behind me and a little to my right is a medical aid station where Navy doctors and hospital corpsmen have labored without rest from the first hour of the landing.

Long lines of wounded men, many of them pitiful stretcher cases, have been moved in and out of the collecting station for the last two days. Many were evacuated to ships standing off shore.

The rain, which has been threatening all morning, is now coming down in sheets and water is streaming over my typewriter and paper despite the shelter which I tried to erect with a poncho and limbs from the pine trees that line the beach.

One good thing about the rain is that it gave us the first semblance of a bath since hitting here. It also relieved the terrific heat, which drains a man's energy.

In a fox-hole behind me is a dead Jap, one of those who were killed trying to defend the beach against the Marines. He doesn't smell good. But then, neither do I.

Children's Department

"I think that I shall never see A poem lovely as a tree." Kilmer. These familiar words by Joyce Kilmer find a responsive echo in our towns and along the country-side today. The trees are in their prime. Take a look at them, and do not just take them for granted!

They are some of the miracles of Mother Nature, these tall, big trees, decked with luscious, green leaves, which line our streets and highways, and form a cooling, fresh protection against a too bright sun. They are lovely and they are interesting, both in summer with their dark foliage and in winter when their knotted branches and dark trunks give one a feeling of character and strength.

Trees always have and always will play a great part in our lives, both from a practical and an esthetic point of view; and many are the absorbing stories of trees which we find in literature, old and new.

What Tree Is That?—Cheney. (5 to 8 grades.) Identification of evergreens and hardwoods with clear pictures of leaves, fruit, and seed for each tree mentioned.

Stories in Trees—Curtis. (3-5). Fourteen tree-legends with poems and other information about trees. Men and Trees—Gae. (6-9.) The value of trees to mankind, how our forests came to be depleted, and the present conservation.

Tree in the Trail—Holling. (4-7.) The story of a cottonwood sapling. How it grew and became a landmark in the west, and how it finally led the trail to Santa Fe.

American Trees—Limbach. (5-8.) Information about oaks, maples, flowering trees, etc., with full-page colored illustrations. Forestry and Lumbering—Perry. (6-8.) Forests in America, growth of forestry, forest fires and fire control, lumbering, sawmills, conservation and the future forests of America.

Book of Woodcraft—Seton. (6-9.) "A mine of information of forestry, camping, natural history, etc."

13 Reasons Why 13 Is Good Luck

The time-honored superstition that the number 13 is unlucky holds no terrors for Walter Shepard of the S. S. Arthur Riggs, Shepard, of Brooklyn, N.Y., has given the American Marine Institute 13 reasons why the number holds no ill fortune for him or his ship:

- 1. His name has 13 letters. 2. He was born on June 13. 3. His title, Chief Engineer, has 13 letters. 4. His last license was issued on June 13. 5. S. S. Arthur Riggs is another "13." 6. It is a "Liberty vessel" (count 'em). 7. The ship was launched on February 13. 8. It went into service on March 13. 9. Arrived in her first port on the 13th (month censored). 10. The ship's speed is 13 knots. 11. The officer's mess is made up of 13 men. 12. The sum of the digits in the ship's hull number 34, equals 13. 13. Recently she sailed for home on the 5th day of the eighth month which adds up to 13 again.
