Enforcement of "Blue Sky" Laws Pledges Benson

Springfield, Ill.—Aimed at protecting Illinois investors from the "wolves of Wall Street" and from the clutches of get-rich-quick operators, Senator Arnold P. Benson, Republican candidate for secretary of state, has pledged a program of impartial enforcement of the so-called state "blue sky laws," designed to drive crooked investment sharks and bucket-shop operators out of business.

Senator Benson explained under the law the secretary of state is charged with enforcement of the Illinois Securities Act, regulating the sale of unlisted stocks and bonds within the state. He said: "Illinois has been regarded as the happy hunting ground for get-rich-quick stock salesmen, who prey on the investing public. When I become secretary of state, I will inaugurate a policy designed to drive these wolves out of Illinois."

"As long as I am head of that office, no securities will be approved by me for sale in this state without first having made careful inquiry and investigation of the company and the individuals proposing to issue them."

"I will not be impressed by a long list of directors, imposing as it may seem, nor with a balance sheet that does not fully set up all the financial requirements necessary for the full protection of investors. I propose to personally scrutinize every application for the sale of securities and will insist upon an audit of company books together with an appraisal by experts of all physical properties and other assets to determine if they are sufficient to meet financial obligation to stockholders."

Some idea of the magnitude of transactions in unlisted securities in Illinois may be gained from the fact that upwards of a half billion dollars worth are passed upon annually by the secretary of state's office. Dealers, brokers, solicitors and agents offering them for sale are required to register with the state.

Air-Sea Rescue Agency Assigned to Coast Guard

A plane was flying off the California coast at 17,000 feet. Suddenly the motor quit. The pilot sent in his distress message. Before his plane hit the water a Coast Guard plane and boat were under way. The man was rescued a bit later.

On another occasion a crash at sea was reported. Nine minutes later surface craft were under way. A plane took off twelve minutes after the crash. Men in the water were sighted from the plane seventeen minutes after the crash, were picked up 20 minutes after the crash and were being flown to their home field 23 minutes after their mishaps.

This is Air-Sea rescue, the split-second operation that has been made a Coast Guard responsibility. With the tremendous growth of transportation in time of war, a growth which is certain to carry over into the post-war world, this agency has been geared to meet the ever-increasing pace of air and sea travel.

First steps in organization of the Air-Sea rescue agency, after months of research, were announced by Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche, USCG, commander of the Coast Guard, who with his aide Commander W. J. Smith, USCG, recently completed an inspection of Coast Guard units in the European-North American war theater.

First American Air-Sea rescue unit, as such, went into operation in San Diego, December, 1943. Since that time, when rescue was possible, 98 per cent of the military personnel in aircraft crashes have been saved through coordination of information, facilities and operations in the southern sector of the Western Sea frontier.

Similar units were established in San Francisco, Seattle and the East coast.

Time Tells
It happened during the rush for gasoline ration coupons, and the scene was an American high school.

The white-haired teacher at the table looked up and grinned at the man standing before her, application in hand.

"Well," she cried, "after all these years I'm finally able to give you an 'A'!"—Public Service Magazine.

12. Is it improper to eat the lettuce upon which a salad is served?

Answers
1. Following her husband's death, a woman is known socially by the name she used during her husband's lifetime. Mrs. John Jones continues to be known as Mrs. John Jones.
2. This is a matter of choice. When the initial of the surname is in the center it is usually larger than the others.

3. Dishes are always removed from the right and served from the left.
4. The gift of an engagement ring is largely controlled by the convenience of the prospective groom. There is no arbitrary rule concerning the method by which he gives the ring to his fiancée.
5. It is not usual nor necessary to affix them to his name on an envelope.
6. It is not necessary to thank a maid for such services.
7. A woman never takes off her gloves to shake hands, no matter when or where, and never apologizes for wearing gloves when shaking hands.
8. Use the form of name which appears in the visiting card, also adding the name of town or city which is one's permanent place of abode.
9. In recognizing clergymen or distinguished men of his acquaintance.

10. Many people still incline the head slightly when speaking to acquaintances on the street. The deep bow or curtsy of women and the waist deep bend of men had been modified to a great extent by 1860.
11. No. Your sending a gift is a matter of your own desire and ability to gratify it.
12. Inclination may guide a person. The lettuce may be eaten if one chooses.

U. S. Engineers Perform Vital Roles at Saipan

(By Marine Sgt. Bob Cooke)
Marianas Islands, (Delayed) — The Marine engineers were working down a 30-degree grade with the equatorial sun and enemy snipers blazing at their backs. Ahead lay smoking Makunsha village, under mortar fire for three days and still a rat nest of resistance. Behind them was Karaberra Pass, the only road approach to the village and its surrounding coconut groves.

This was the area, cut off from Marine lines, by sheer cliffs, where the enemy had staged a counter-attack the night before. Burning U. S. jeeps and trucks and scattered American bodies on the beach ahead were evidence of the battle.
