Eskimos Outsmart GI's At Old Army Game
(By Paul Marsh, Coast Guard Correspondent)
Veteran Coast Guardsmen stationed in Alaska chuckled when two recently arrived buddies made purchases in the native curio market.
One G. I. Joe proudly displayed a miniature totem pole, about a foot in height and very gayly colored, for which he had paid 10 dollars. "Nothing like it in my home town of San Francisco," he said.
His companion from Chicago was equally jubilant over a bargain. It was a multithread shawl replete with Eskimo designs, which he explained was painstakingly woven by a princess of the Thlinket tribe.
But the souvenir-wary Coast Guardsmen, accustomed to the vagaries of the native curio market, were unimpressed. One quick glimpse of the recent acquisitions brought forth loud guffaws of sympathetic laughter.
When they turned over the totem pole, they pointed out to its new owner a tiny inscription burned into the wood. Although it was covered with paint, it was easy enough to decipher the words, "Made in San Francisco."
Slowly the Chicago G. I. scrutinized his hand-woven Thlinket princess scarf. His face dropped when he found a small label, almost obscured by a blotch of scarlet. The label read, "Made in Chicago."

Get Mail Only Twice a Year!
By a Coast Guard Correspondent
At a Coast Guard base in Alaska, (Special). — Service men and civilians who complain about an occasional irregular mail delivery should hearken to the plight of coast guardsmen who get letters only twice a year.
Stationed at the ice-bound light-houses and inaccessible units in Alaska, their only means of communication with the outside world is by a lone plane which makes limited non-stop flights.
Because there is no available landing area, mail is dropped in specially constructed pouches as near as possible to the various military establishments. It's up to the letter-getters from then on.
These coast guardsmen report that they open their letters at planned intervals so that they will have mail regularly throughout the waiting period until the next plane zooms over.
So, if that eagerly awaited billet donx arrives a day late, don't gripe. You don't have to wait six months.
Study the past if you would divine the future.—Confucius.

Highland Park High Opens Guidance Room
With the opening of the new Guidance room at the local high school this week, it becomes easier for the students to narrow their choices of colleges before the college representatives come in February. This room has not been designed for juniors and seniors only, but also for the frosh and soph.
Opening at 8:15 a.m., the room will remain open through the day with one person from the student council in charge. Attendance is limited to six students at a time. On one wall appears a large map of the United States on which 250 schools are represented: red, co-ed; yellow, men; blue, women.
There is a rack of "view books" arranged alphabetically, which includes photographic scenes of the colleges. A tremendous supply of material covering every career of interest is supplied, including information on the armed forces, cadet nursing, etc. There are a variety of displays which will change with current interest.
The material in your guidance room belongs to you, students, and it's up to you to use it; your use will determine its success. Come, frosh, begin early!

LANGUAGE APITUDE TESTS GIVEN FEB. 5
Language aptitude tests are to be given Monday, Feb. 5, at the Highland Park high school.
The purpose of these tests, which are to be given the first and second periods, is to determine whether the students have the ability to study a foreign language with any success.
Gaining an early lead, the Amundsen quintet beat the Highland Park varsity by a score of 47 to 39 last Saturday, Jan. 27, in the Highland Park gym.
It was a close game all the way, with Eugene Melchiorre sparking the Little Giants' offensive drive, which was handicapped by the tall Amundsen pivot man, who played a great game both offensively and defensively.
It was in the final stages of the game that the Little Giants went to pieces defensively. What had been a close battle was thus turned into a decisive triumph for Amundsen.
The Highland Park frosh-soph came from behind to win their second game this season. The Ponies, who, behind all the way, were trailing by two points with five seconds to play, when Nels Johnson intercepted a pass and went down for a basket to win the game, 37 to 36.

Amundsen Beats Varsity Frosh-Soph Wins Thriller
Pharmacist's mate Harold E. Carlson, Hollywood, Calif., said: "Meeting my sons out here was the No. 1 thrill of the war." The elder Carlson and his son, James, are both aboard coast guard-manned LST's. Another son, Robert, is fire-control man on a navy escort carrier.
Prior to the invasion of Leyte, the Carlsons met at an advanced naval base in the South Pacific. Then they joined their respective ships to take part in the invasion.
We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purpose of profiting by dear bought experience.—George Washington.

HPHS Aims to Enroll 90 P. C. in Stamp Drive
To show that 90% of our students are buying war stamps each month, a new system was developed at the last Victory Corps meeting and will be presented on February 5.
When 90% of HPHS are buying stamps, a lifeboat will be placed under the picture of the parachutists on the main hall bulletin board.

"Goodbye Mr. Germ" To be Shown at HPHS
Beginning with a movie entitled "Goodbye Mr. Germ," Highland Park high school will start its fight for this year against tuberculosis. This moving picture will be shown Wednesday, Feb. 7, to all freshmen and new students for the purpose of pointing out the value of the T.B. tests which will be given later on.
These tests have been given at the high school since 1940. The percentage of active cases discovered is not high, but the great benefits to those who have been discovered are worth the trouble. The tests discover the disease before it gets to a place where it can't be cured.
Purchasing Christmas seals makes possible this testing program. Ninety-five cents out of every seal sale dollar stays in the state in which it is raised.

Father, Two Sons Meet at Leyte
By a Coast Guard Correspondent
Leyte, Philippine Islands. (Special). — A coast guard father, veteran of four amphibious invasions, visited his two fighting sons out here and participated with them in the initial assault on the Philippines.

Among the students of the senior executive board who planned this dance are Francis Fiore, president; Dave Dean, vice-president; Marge Mann, secretary and treasurer; Jack Stroud, social chairman; Ralph Lautman, Dick Patton, Judy Schultz and L. T. Young.

"There Are No Provisions For Your Return!!!"
Aboard a Coast Guard-Manned Patrol Frigate at Leyte (Special) — Moving toward the entrance of Leyte Gulf on D-Day minus 4, two Coast Guard-manned patrol frigates received orders to knock out Japanese installations on Homonhon and Dinagat Islands, which meant firing the first shots at the Philippines.
The last terse message from their flagship was: "There are no provisions for your return."
Standing off Homonhon and Dinagat on D-Day minus 3, the two frigates were riding out a typhoon which prevented the landing of troops or the shelling of enemy positions.
However, 48 hours before the planned amphibious invasion of Leyte, the frigates "chose up sides," each taking an island. At 3,800 yards range their guns opened up with the first shots of the Philippine liberation. Twenty minutes later army rangers landed on Dinagat and Homonhon and secured positions.
Coast guardsmen also were credited with firing the first shots for this country in the war against Germany when they attacked and captured a Nazi radio station in Greenland in 1941.
