

DEEPS and SHALLOWS

Casualty

Oh grieve not with a sorrow unestrained For him who dying gladly gave a life That all may live in brotherhood unstained Who measured not his sacrifice in strife.

ADELAIDE KOCH.

No Relation to Augustin

You won't know what I'm talking about if you didn't grow up in Wisconsin, or haven't relatives there, or if you think the words of your most elementary waltz song are "Where, oh where is my little dog gone?" To you, "Lauterbach" would be just another Tyrolian village between Salzburg and Vienna, where the Arlberg Express from Paris to Istanbul thunders through.

But every beer drinking Wisconsinite knows Lauterbach as the age to lose your stocking, but naturally, without it, you can't go home. So you have to go back to Lauterbach, ostensibly to recover the stocking, but actually for another round of beer.

Just what is the delay in mopping up Lauterbach, I can't explain. WISCONSIN IRMA.

Grandpa Munchausen Tells A Tall One

Barbara was sitting on Grandpa's knee, reading the funnies, when suddenly Grandpa sneezed. It was no insipid, lady-like sneeze, but a real grandpa-sized "Kerchoo!" and it startled Barbara so that she toppled right off his knee.

"Think nothing of it, Barbara," said Grandpa. "I know all about my sneezes. Listen, and I'll tell you what one of my sneezes did to Butch once — and Butch's a boy!"

"You see, Butch was sitting on my lap, just like you, one day, when I felt a sneeze coming on. And all at once it took me. Well, you shoulda seen Butch! He was so startled that he jumped right out of his pants! And mind you, that ain't all. I looked around for him and what do you suppose I saw? There was Butch scooting one way and his pants the other! It sure gave me a shock."

CUPID'S CORNER

Ida Rebeschini Bride Of Overseas Veteran

On Saturday, at St. James church in Highwood, Miss Ida Rebeschini, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rebeschini, 1329 Burton, became the bride of S/Sgt. Chester J. Raskiewicz, of Wheeling, W. Va.

The bride was gowned in cream satin and net, with fingertip veil, and carried a white prayerbook decorated with gardenias. Mrs. James Di Pietro of Chicago, as matron of honor, wore white celanese with flower-trimmed bandeau and carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

A wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lambert of Highwood followed the ceremony, and Mrs. Mario Preti, Highwood, also a sister of the bride, served the wedding dinner.

The marriage is the culmination of a romance which began in 1941 at Fort Sheridan. Since that time the bridegroom has served two and one-half years in Iceland and Ireland and later saw action in France, where he received serious injuries, from which he is convalescing at Camp Pickett, Va. He is now on a 60-day leave.

The young couple plan to live in Richmond, near his hospital base.

Miss Emily Norcross Plans Summer Wedding

The engagement of Miss Emily Norcross to Gordon Adamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Adamson of 310 Egandale, has been announced by Dr. and Mrs. Pliny Norcross, of Highland Park and La Porte, Indiana.

The bride-to-be is a sister of Dr. Norcross, now on the medical staff of a La Porte war plant, and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. George Allan Mason, 180 Hazel, with whom she makes her home.

Miss Norcross is an alumna of Kemper hall and Northwestern university, and her fiancé was a student at the University of Chicago.

A summer wedding is being planned.

REV. WILSON WEDS COUPLE AT CHURCH

The First United Evangelical church was the scene of a private wedding recently when Rev. R. S. Wilson, pastor, united in marriage Miss Betty Fanning of Jackson-ville, Ill., and T. J. Walter S. Mansfield of Rockland, Maine, using the single ring ceremony. Mr. Mansfield is in the adjutant general's office at Fort Sheridan. The couple was attended by Mrs. Betty Moorehead, a friend of the bride, and Cpl. Don James of Fort Sheridan. The couple will reside in Highland Park while the husband is stationed here. The bride is employed in Highland Park.

Presbyterian Women Will Hold Spring Luncheon

The Woman's association of the Highland Park Presbyterian church will have its annual spring luncheon and all day meeting on Monday, May 21, at the parish house. This is the last general meeting for the summer months.

There will be sewing, hospital dressings and knapsack library at 10, a chancel service, led by Mrs. A. G. Humphrey at 12, luncheon at 12:30 and at 2, Mrs. Milton Youngren will review "Winds Blow Gently" by Ronald Kirkbride.

Mrs. Buchanan's group is in charge of the luncheon and Mrs. Thorney's group will sponsor the food sale.

Stork Express

An eight-pound package was delivered via Stork Express, Thursday, May 3, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Whitney, 111 Dale Ave. The little granddaughter has been named Laurel Leigh. Her mother is the former Patricia Busby of Chicago, and her father is Ens. Daniel Rockefeller Whitney, who for the last three months has been serving on APA duty in the South Pacific. The maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Busby of Chicago.

Kisses Reap Harvest

A mysterious call at the office of The PRESS on Monday inquired for Mrs. Clara Carcy. We were unable to help locate the lady. A radio announcer that evening explained the motive for the call. Mrs. Clara Carcy, of Highland Park, was named in the will of a Milwaukee bachelor as a beneficiary in his will. She was an old-time sweetheart, whose 12 platonic kisses, way back in 1899, netted her $500 in 1945. Married, and with a 24-year-old son, she is employed at Villa Moderna.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin L. Strauss Jr., now living at 5337 Hyde Park Blvd., Chicago, have purchased a home at 524 Vernon, Glencoe, and will move there June 1.

Idiosyncrasies of Local Characters

Should you have recently seen a young Merchant Mariner about town wearing an ear-ring in the lobe of his left ear, think nothing of it. This is, according to M/M Roy Gamache, 17, son of Mrs. Marie Gamache, 12 Ravine, merely an old Casablanca custom. Although the young veteran of European service professes to treat the matter lightly, he admits that when a girl of that area presents a man with one of her ear-rings to wear in his left ear, it means that she thinks well of him. And when he appears with it in the right ear — brother, that means business.

Another young Mariner, Bert Callan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Callan Sr., 1731 Deerfield, is sporting a surprising amount of whisker for a 17-year-old, and means to retain it until he reports to his ship — or so the story goes.

A natty hirsute job also adorns the countenance of Mr. Sewell Truax, 330 Egandale, who is employed in a Chicago defense plant. And thereby, also, hangs a tale.

Shortly after the tragedy of Pearl Harbor, Mr. Truax stood in a line of eager volunteers for the U. S. Navy. To their intense chagrin, both he and the man ahead were rejected. Straightaway they made a pact that neither — both, in their haste that morning had neglected the razor — would remove his mustache until (1) he was accepted for service, or (2) the war was over. The man ahead subsequently made the grade, and became a war casualty when his carrier, the Hornet, was sunk.

We all join with Mr. Truax in pulling for an early V-J Day.

Show Musical Instruments At Public Library

There is an exhibit of early musical instruments at the Public Library. Loaned by the Dushkin School of Music in Winnetka, this small exhibit contains several variations of the recorder — the forerunner of our present day transverse flute.

The recorder was of English origin, but its popularity from the 16th through the 19th century extended throughout the continent of Europe. There are frequent references to the instrument in the English literature of the time, in Shakespeare, Milton and Peypys as well as several others.

Because of the range in size and consequently in tone and pitch, the recorder was used extensively not only as a solo instrument but in sets of three, four or five.

Along with the instruments, there are some fine examples of music of the time, written with recorder parts. With the exception of the flageolet which is displayed, these recorders are modern reproductions.

Local Girl Plays at Peace Conference

Miss Elaine Wertheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wertheimer, 834 S. Linden, is the only non-professional musician to play in the Oakland Symphony orchestra at the San Francisco peace conference.

Miss Wertheimer, a student at Mills college in California, plays fifth chair in the first violin section of the orchestra.

Braeside Benefit Card Party, Friday, May 18

Braesiders are being asked to reserve Friday, May 18, as the date for the benefit card party sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Civic association. The affair will be held in the school auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets will sell for $1.20. There will be raffles, door and table prizes, and refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the evening.

Mrs. Paul Jester is chairman of the event. Assisting her on the committee are Messrs. Philip Sparling and Fred Mudge, co-chairmen, Mrs. Hamilton Winter, tickets; Mrs. Theodore Uehling, prizes; Mrs. John Callender, tables; and Mrs. Robert Glasgow, refreshments.

Girl scouts from the 7th and 8th grades are assisting in the sale of tickets.

Lt. Lidicker Accounted Lucky One in Million

Almost unheard-of good luck attended Lt. John E. Lidicker, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Lidicker, 1844 Deerfield, when he was shot down in Germany on April 11. In a letter he states that he was one in a million to receive the care he did at the hands of the enemy.

Although a previous report stated that his injuries were slight, it is learned that he met with serious injuries to his back and was burned about the hands and face. He was well-treated by German civilians and later by German soldiers who arranged a truce with the Allies and transported Lidicker carefully to a place where American paratroopers met and conducted him to their lines. He is now in a hospital in England.

VETERANS ATTEND MOTHER'S DAY SERVICES

Three veterans of the present war attended the Mother's Day services in the First United Evangelical church Sunday morning. All three are on furlough after service overseas. They are Pfc. Gordon Ralph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ralph, 425 McDaniels, on furlough from a hospital in Jackson, Miss., where he is convalescing from wounds received in the European area; Sgt. Melvin Moon of 26 S. Green Bay, who was able to be present as he is now on furlough from a hospital in Battle Creek where he is convalescing from wounds received in the Philippines; C. Allen Thorsen, MoMM 1/c, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Thorsen of 339 North avenue, on leave after serving on an LST in both the Pacific and European areas. These boys were able to attend the service with their mothers and other members of their families. The attendance filled the auditorium of the church.

Last Rites Held for Local Jurist Saturday

Funeral rites were held at Trinity Episcopal church on Saturday for Judge Francis E. Baldwin, 359 Hazel, who passed away on Thursday of last week, following a sudden seizure while golfing at Exmoor club, a few days before.

Born in Hiawatha, Kans., 69 years ago, the deceased had been a resident of Highland Park for the past 15 years. A graduate of Washington university in St. Louis, Mo., he was professionally associated with the Chicago Bar association, and former legal counsel for Swift & Company. Prior to coming to Chicago he served as co-judge in Morgan county, Ill. At one time he was president of Exmoor country club.

Surviving are his widow, Elizabeth Bell Baldwin; a daughter, Mrs. Baldwin Newman; a son, Capt. Robert Bruce Baldwin, now stationed in Burma; and two grandchildren, all of Highland Park.

Blood Plasma Still In Great Demand

Attendance at the Chicago Red Cross Blood donor center has dropped off seriously and collections during the past month were the lowest the office has experienced since January, 1943, according to Mrs. Herbert Smith, Highland Park blood donor chairman.

Information received by Red Cross officials indicates that plasma is still in great demand in Europe, as well as in the Pacific. Gigantic preparations are now being made for further large scale offensives to be conducted by Gen. McArthur and Adm. Nimitz. Plasma is an essential part of these preparations. It must be delivered now, not after the offensives start.

Blood is urgently needed and appointments at the Chicago blood donor center are insufficient to meet the demand. The center is at 5 N. Wabash. Tel. Wabash 7850.
