Veterans Appreciate Quiet

Returning veterans, particularly those who are trying to master and overcome newly-acquired disabilities, have found the craft shop an answer to their individual needs, and are gradually working their way back to a normal, or at least a near-normal use of their injured members.

Upstairs, in the main floor lounge, more members of the Fort personnel congregate than anywhere else in tavern-conscious Highland. These men have families, most of them, and their use of the club's facilities demonstrates the character of the fathers and husbands who must, in the country's service, remain away from home, wife and youngsters. These men are not interested in lavish programs, frilly dances, blaring bands. What they want most is just a little bit of home, that part they can capture each evening when they write the daily letter home, or sit and read the evening paper or a book from the library shelf, again just as they might do at home.

Unit Called "Second Home"

These were the home-town fellows, much like our own, from all over America, who were dumbfounded to hear that the National Headquarters of the USO had decided to close this club. They'd all been in many other USO clubs, all over the country. But they'd never found any like this one. This one seemed like — well, as much as any club could, it seemed like home. Many of them called it that, their "second home."

Vets Submit Petition

They got busy immediately to protest the closing order. They contacted the American Legion in Highland Park who got solidly behind them, with an urgent resolution requesting reconsideration of the decision. They talked with service clubs and prominent citizens, enlisting their help. Soon letters of local business men and citizens, wires from groups and organizations, began to reach National USO headquarters.

Through their officers they approached the post commander at Fort Sheridan, who asserted his desire to keep the Salvation Army USO open. They called on the chief secretary of the Salvation Army in Chicago, and obtained first-hand assurance that the Salvation Army welcomed all possible help in keeping the club active. And they sent 600 soldiers' personal expressions, urging reconsideration, to the USO National headquarters.

They established the fact that attendance at the Salvation Army USO was the heaviest of any local facility, and they went on record in every way they knew how that they wanted to keep the Salvation Army USO open, to provide the facilities they couldn't find anywhere else, and preferred here.

Activity at Fort Increasing

We can help them; we should help them. We're the backers of the whole USO movement. We were sold on it enough to support it, financially, generously. Now they need something instead of money. They need our help in keeping this facility open to them. We can help by addressing personal letters and telegrams requesting that the Salvation Army USO in Highland be continued, in the light of the increased activity at the Fort, now personnel headquarters for the entire Sixth Service Command, housing more permanent personnel than ever before, and due to continue in this manner for another year or two.

Preferred to Taverns

Let's write, today, to the National Headquarters, USO, Empire State Building, New York City. We'd want the citizens of another community to extend this help to our home-town boys, if they needed it and asked for it. Time is of the essence. It is important that letters and telegrams reach National Headquarters at the earliest possible moment. The alternative may be to offer the boys another tavern. We in Highland Park don't consider a tavern very home-like.

Poem by Veteran of Crimean War, Written 91 Years Ago

(The lines were written by John George Baker, grandfather of Wm. J. Obee, 154 S. Second, at the time of the Crimean war in 1854, 91 years ago. Mr. Baker was a sergeant-major of the Light Dragon Guards in the British army during that war and fought in Russia in 1854 and in the Indian Mutiny of 1857. While stationed in Russia he wrote letters to his daughter, Mr. Obee's mother, who treasured them as keepsakes. Mr. Obee, who was born in England, Oct. 1, 1862, and came with his family in 1870, loved to read these letters, and also this poem, which he committed to memory. It is significant in that it proves that history often repeats itself.)

"When war is proclaimed And danger is nigh, God and the soldier Are the people's pride. When war is over, And danger is righted, God is forgotten, And the soldier slighted."

WHAT'S COOKING
Ten-penny nails, six-penny, three-penny nails today denote sizes of nails. Long years ago these terms indicated the prices, as nails were sold in England at so many pence per hundred nails by size.

ERIC A. JOHNSON SAYS
"America is a wealthy nation enjoying unprecedented levels of comfort and culture, of course, when contrasted with other countries, or when contrasted with our past. But these things are relative. We are still incredibly poor and shamefully backward when measured by the yardstick of our unexploited possibilities. The areas we have conquered, in the matter of living standards and general improvement are pathetically small when compared with the uncharted spaces still to be conquered."
