A collection will be taken immediately after the service to assist in this work. The Gideons, International, is an association of Christian business men who are members in good standing in their respective churches. The organization was founded in July, 1899, and since its founding has placed 2,300,000 Bibles in hotels, hospitals, schools, and penal institutions. Nine million New Testaments and Psalms, with various helps, have been furnished to chaplains for distribution to the men and women in our armed forces. The North Shore camp now numbers over 80 members, augmented by the auxiliary. A monthly meeting is held. One aim is to visit each church in the North Shore area once each year with a report of their labors, and to take a collection for Gideon Bibles. Since the recent war was declared about $15,000 has been collected from this area alone.

20,000 Engineers—

promptly as possible. "Licensed architects and structural engineers are exempt from coming under the act, but the act provides that they may come under it if they desire and be licensed without examination as professional engineers upon application to the department within one year.

"Engineers who were in the armed forces or the merchant marine at the time of the law's enactment also may obtain a certificate without examination by filing an application within one year after the termination of their military service."

The 66 war veteran applicants include 48 men still in uniform and 18 who have been discharged from the services. Director Thompson said these and all other applications filed under the new statute would be passed upon by the examining committee created by the statute and composed of outstanding members of the engineering profession.

the name of Constantinople to Istanbul and moved the national capital from there to Ankara. He separated church from state and instituted other changes too numerous to mention.

The present president of Turkey is Inanu. Less dramatic than his predecessor, Inanu is in some respects an equally effective leader. Our committee held an hour's conference with him during which he reviewed Turkey's position and contributions during the war. He made a very convincing presentation of the case for Turkey and he spoke straight from the shoulder in a manner which gave meaning to the phrase "talking Turkey."

More than any other country in the whole Russian orbit, Turkey has withstood the inroads and the infringements of Communism. A country which in 22 years can alter its entire national outlook and which during the war years of 1941 to 1945 built over 700 buildings for educational purposes is not to be too greatly disparaged. English is being made the second language of Turkey and the greatest compliment which can be paid to a Turk is to call his country "the America of Europe." Today, such a statement is a bit hyperbolic—but if the pace of progress continues this new young state which encompasses parts of both Asia and Europe may make its dream come true.

The Smallest and Newest Republic
Lebanon today is the world's smallest and newest Republic. With only about a million inhabitants, it appears to have finally won its freedom from the French mandate and to be well along the road toward taking its part as a completely free and independent country. Like its friendly and larger neighbor, Syria, which has shared progress toward independence with Lebanon, this country is exceedingly proud of its new status.

Both in Lebanon and Syria, however, one sees sorry examples of the manner in which large nations charged with a mandate come to consider their temporary trust as though it were a permanent colony. France was given the mandate over Lebanon and Syria after World War I and these countries were promised their independence for their support of the United Nations cause during World War II. When the time came to redeem that promise, however, the French objected to the complete relinquishment of their special position in the two countries.

As a result, in both Syria and Lebanon the armed forces of France endeavored to reestablish French authority by force of arms. Many Lebanese and Syrians were ruthlessly killed. To make matters worse, some of the lend-lease supplies from America to France were used by the French troops to bomb and kill the people of these two freedom-seeking republics. Tools intended to strengthen the four freedoms in the world were misused by one of the Big Five to strangle the rights of free choice in Lebanon and Syria. Happily, right triumphed over might, and while some French troops maintain positions in Beirut and Damascus, it now appears that they may soon be withdrawn. In Damascus, however, this summer the French fired great shells into the center of the city and wrecked the parliament building, several hotels and business blocks, and even did damage to the American embassy.

A study of the history of Lebanon and Syria for the past 30 years provides strong evidence to condemn the so-called "mandate system" as a device for maintaining peace and obtaining justice.

The Problem of Palestine.
Palestine is the Holy Land held sacred alike by Christians, Jews, and Mohammedans. Today it is the center of a bitter and violent controversy revolving around the number of Jews to be admitted as residents of Palestine and the question of whether the country is to be established as a separate and independent Jewish state.

For the better part of two feverish days, our committee took transcribed testimony from Christian, Jewish, and Arab leaders alike while British tanks and command cars roamed the streets and highways to avert the bloodshed which appeared imminent as the passions of both Jews and Arabs flamed to white heat. Two men were killed and several injured by conflicts between the two groups in Palestine one of the nights that we stayed in Jerusalem. The extremists of both groups refuse to talk compromise and the British, who are charged with maintaining order in Palestine, are finding lar with both Jews and Arabs.

President Magnus of the great Hebrew university in Jerusalem has been pleading for a middle course to be followed by both Jews and Arabs to the advantage of each as he sees it and his program is supported by Christian leaders in Palestine but most Jews and most Arabs of the area oppose it. All in all, what is called "the Palestine question" appears to be one of the most difficult for which to evolve a satisfactory solution of any of the many knotty problems which remain to plague the world. Like most questions it is at least a two-sided question and with the Christians of Palestine and Lebanon (which has a majority of its citizens of Christian faith) now showing increased concern over what is to be done with an area filled with places sacred to Christians, it may well become a three-sided question.

It is a sad commentary on human nature that the birthplace of the Prince of Peace should become the focal point for some of the bitterest jealousies and hatreds of the current era. Should these passions overflow into bloody fighting or a general scale the saga of what man has done to the tenets of brotherly love in the last 1945 years will be even sadder.

Telephone Co. Employees—
office clerks and $2.00 per week for clerks outside the central offices seemed to be the largest amounts allowable. The company offered the $4.00 and $2.00, retroactive to May 9, 1945. Similar increases were offered to Chicago local and long line operators and were accepted by them. Also, many like increases for traffic employees in other parts of the country have been ordered by the telephone commission and its decisions have, in general, been accepted in good grace by both the unions and the companies.

The Illinois Telephone Traffic union, however, refused to agree and the case was referred to the telephone commission to decide. A detailed hearing of all the issues involved was held Aug. 14, 1945. Due to the sudden termination of the war, the commission had to change its procedure and it asked both the union and the company jointly to decide the basis on which the case should be settled. As a result of this request, it was agreed that the commission should decide the issue according to the wartime rules with the permission to reopen further wage negotiations within sixty days.

Up to this time, all of the rules were followed and the entire matter was being handled in the orderly way provided by the government through the telephone commission. However, on Oct. 18 the union, ahead of any decision of the commission, filed its notice of intention to strike if its demands were not met.

Late last week, the commission rendered its decision. It provided that all operators and other central office employees should receive increases of $4.00 per week except for one grouping of small towns, which should receive $5.00. The commission further provided that the length of time normally taken to reach maximum salaries should be reduced. The commission's decision provides increases of $2.00 for certain clerical groups and $3 for certain other clerical groups outside the central office with corresponding reductions in length of time in which to reach maximum salaries.

The company accepts this decision and is ready to put the increases into effect and to make the retroactive payments back to May 9, 1945, as promptly as possible.

Under the commission's decision all operators and other central office employees will receive at least $4.00 per week increase for a five-day week. "Take home" pay will, of course, be increased even more because of work beyond the normal five-day week. For example, operators and other central office employees who are working six days per week will receive "take home" increases of about five and one-half dollars per week.

Assuming the new rates are made effective as soon as possible a few of the retroactive checks will be as large as $250 and a great number will be about $150.

A further important fact is that these increases, under the commission's decision, cover retroactive adjustments for the wartime period. They have nothing to do with any increases for the postwar period. The company has invited the union to come in and discuss postwar wages at their earliest convenience so that further general increases in line with post war conditions can be negotiated in an orderly manner.

There is also an agreement between the company and the union to discuss town reclassifications as soon as the present case is settled. This will result in further increases for many individual.

One Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 13, the meeting of the parties with the U. S. conciliator was again in progress. The company indicated a willingness to arbitrate the wage recommendations in the commission's decision to which the union is objecting. It offered to pay the amount indicated by the commission and arbitrate the excess demanded by the union. The union refused arbitration.
