Dear Mrs. Baker:

Your resignation as a member of the board of the Highland Park Co-ordinating council has been received. The board members here-by wish to express their deep regret that the removal of your family to Detroit makes it necessary for them to accept it.

But, in accepting it, we wish to pay tribute to the outstanding quality of your service to the community as a member of the Co-ordinating council since its organization in 1940.

The inspiration of your personality will remain with those who have worked with you. PUBLIC LIBRARY

Gardening

Overheard on the evening of February 12: "The silly little things are pushing thru the earth." The quotation referred to daffodils in a protected spot, which comment leads us to consider gardening books this early in the year.

The library has many books on flower gardening. Books covering a wide range such as "America's Garden Book" by Bush-Brown; "Gardening with the Experts" and "10,000 Garden Questions Answered" by F. F. Rockwell. Then there are the specialized ones on lilies, roses, chrysanthemums, delphiniums, and many others. A few on lesser known phases of gardening are listed below:

"Pioneering With Wildflowers," by G. D. Aiken. Those interested in bringing wildflowers into their gardens will find this book extremely helpful. Little has been written on this subject and those interested usually need advice as the transplanting of wild plants is difficult for most.

"Herbs, How to Grow Them and How to Use Them," by H. N. Webster. The past few years has brought a revival of the old time "yarb patch." This book gives a little of the history of herb gardens, general horticultural directions, drying and curing herbs, and a check list of herbs for modern gardens.

"Right in Your Own Backyard," by H. W. Steck, is not so much a book of how and when of planting seeds, transplanting seedlings, etc., as how to make your yard a liveable place with garden walks, fences, barbecues, garden tools as well as flowers and vegetables.

"Garden of Gourds," by L. H. Bailey. Gourds are simple to raise according to Mr. Bailey, and may be used for decorative purposes in the home carrying the bright summer yellows and greens through the winter.

"American Ferns, How to Know, Grow, and Use Them," by E. A. Roberts. After telling how to identify the different ferns the author describes how to gather the plants, without robbing the fern world, by collecting only the fertile frond and then growing one's own from spores.

Loo Fountain. The maternal grandparents reside in Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Eleanor Wagner of the Pleasant avenue address, is the paternal grandmother, with whom the baby's parents are temporarily residing until they move to Milwaukee where he is employed.

The baby's father received his discharge in November from the army air corps after 4 years in the service. A staff sergeant, he was stationed in Panama and So. America for 3 years.

Urge Women of World War II to Join Legion Auxiliary

Help of women of World War II families to carry on the work of the American Legion auxiliary for World War II veterans is needed by Highwood and Highland Park units of the auxiliaries, Mrs. Egbert Carlsen and Mrs. Phil Cole, rehabilitation chairmen, state, as the units continue enrollment of members for 1946.

"Welfare of disabled veterans always has been a first interest of the American Legion auxiliary," said the chairmen. "They are the comrades of our sons, husbands, fathers and brothers, and they have sacrificed health and strength in defense of our country. We feel it to be our responsibility to help them and their families in every way we can.

"After the first World War the condition of the disabled was deplorable. The auxiliary worked with the Legion to secure adequate hospital care and just compensation for them, and to help them get started in life after they were able to leave the hospitals. This work for the disabled of World War I continued to be a major activity of the auxiliary, increasing as more veterans became disabled as a result of war service.

"Now we have the disabled veterans of World War II, more than one million of them, who need the same type of aid. With the help of the women of World War II families who are now coming into our organizations, we are expanding our rehabilitation program to include them all. The activity has strong appeal to these women and because of their closeness to the veterans of this war, they can give to the work the understanding and sympathy so necessary to its success."

Both units of the American Legion auxiliary are now inviting into membership all mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of World War II veterans who have joined the American Legion, those persons who died in the service, and women who themselves are veterans of the war. The enrollment of those eligible through World War II is being continued as in previous years.
