

Deep and Shallows

The Dirty Dawg!

A patient ox, so the fables run,
Approaching his stall, when day
was done,
Intent upon a well-earned feast;
But in his manger lay a beast
With snapping eyes and vicious fangs —
With no regard for hunger's pangs!
"Friend," said the ox, in haste to munch,
"I fear you're resting on my lunch.
No doubt you're tired as all creation,
But we can best this situation:
If you move over a mite, I feel You still can rest — I'll have my meal."
Said the dog, with a twist of his cruel jaw:
"Possession is nine points of the law;
You thrive on hay — it's very true,
But I can't eat it — and neither shall you!
I have no use for the scratchy
stuff;
Now pull your freight, or I'll really get tough!"
Said the ox: "You have some screwy views — Begrudging other what you can't use;
I'll munch a while, and then I'll go . . ."
"The answer," snarled the dog, "is
"No!"
The weary moments see-sawed by —
Demand arrayed against supply.
The ox, urged on by hunger's
pangs,
Approached, to face those vicious
fangs.
His great, brown, gentle eyes were puzzled;
Oh, how he wished that cur were muzzled!
He rightly judged that teeth like those Could tear and rend his tender nose;
At last he hungrily turned away,
With a backward glance at the luscious hay.
Now I ask you — is there anything stranger —
Or ornerier — than a dog-in-the-manger?
—HIGHLAND LASSIE.

Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow

Yesterday: Chuck full of promises . . . yet it glided away silently, and oh, how swiftly, leaving behind many unfinished duties, dumping them into the lap of today.
Today: When the last stroke of midnight fades it begins its hasty flight toward eternity, slipping one second at a time toward its goal.
Accepting the unfinished duties of yesterday, the allotment of time seeming shorter than yesterday.
But . . . there is always tomorrow.
Tomorrow: That promising tomorrow . . . but no different from yesterday or today. Not an iota longer. Bringing with it hopes, or maybe disappointments . . . and yet . . . we wouldn't want to be without it.
Yesterday . . . Today . . . Tomorrow.
—A.C.O.

Tree-Mother

Tree-Mother, watching over me
Outside my window panes,
I love your care and constancy
As courage waxes . . . wanes;
The hours are slow, the days are long,
To one who lies abed,
Yet a refrain of haunting song
Is floating round my head;
It is your whispered lullaby
That I have heard you sing
To tender new-born leaves that cry
Upon your breast each Spring!
—A.W.M.

Flaming Youth

Forgetting our own arrogance
In bygone days, when scorn topped sense,
We marvel at the vehemence
Of flaming youth's intolerance.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

New books for circulation.
Automatic Weapons of the World, by Melvin M. Johnson Jr., captain USMCR (inactive), and Charles T. Haven.
This book, completed at the close of World War II, gives the history and development of automatic arms. It lists and describes all the military automatic arms — rifles, pistols, light and heavy machine guns, submachine guns, and the 40 mm. automatic cannon used by both the Axis and the United Nations. This is a complete revision of the earlier book, Automatic Arms, by the same authors. It has been expanded to nearly double the size and brought up to the minute.

Grounds for Living, edited by Richard B. Farnum and Van Wie Ingham, is for those of you who want to enjoy outdoor living. It does not assume that you are familiar with the Latin name of spinach — in fact, it suspects that you do not know too much about horticultural techniques and so does not hesitate to give simple directions about fundamentals and to include pertinent illustrations. Included are instructions for plantings around your home, what trees to grow and how to care for them; the care of roses, chrysanthemums, and gladioli; vegetable gardening; and the construction of outdoor fireplaces, trellises and fences. It is a live and let-live approach to outdoor living for those who enjoy soaking up sunshine.
Mr. Lincoln's Camera Man, Mathew B. Brady, by Roy Mededith.

In this book, Mr. Meredith has brought to light more than one hundred and twenty of Brady's famous Civil War photographs that have never before been published. He has also reproduced almost two hundred of Brady's portrait photographs of famous men and women of the Civil War period and later — Lincoln, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Lee, Grant, Jenny Lind, Clara Barton, Walt Whitman, P. T. Barnum, and many others. Brady was one of the pioneer photographers of America. He won many prizes for his work and became internationally famous. During the Civil War he was the "official photographer" of the Union army. For the general reader the book is a complete pictorial and textual history of American life from the 1840's to the 1880's. It should be of especial interest to both amateur and professional photographers.

Twentieth Century Checkers, by Kenneth M. Grover and Tommie Wiswell, contains many examples of hypermodern checkers, reviewed and elaborated upon by two of the outstanding American players of today. Mr. Wiswell is the world's No. 1 problemist and one of the top ten players in America. Mr. Grover ranks No. 2 in the United States and has never been defeated in match play. For those who want to learn the 'whys and wherefores' of modern scientific checkers this book is a must.
The Saints That Moved The World, by Rene Fulop-Miller, is designed for modern readers. The author believes that human greatness should be restated in a way that every reader, whether Protestant, Catholic, Jew, or even Agnostic, can appreciate and enjoy. The book consists of five parts, each one concerned primarily with one major saint. Rather than being five separate essays the book, taken together, emerges as a composite picture of perfect humanity, as the life of each saint succeeded in perfecting one aspect of the Character of Christ: St. Anthony, the Saint of Renunciation; St. Augustine, the Saint of Intellect; St. Francis, the Saint of Love; St. Ignatius, the Saint of Will Power; and Saint Theresa, the Saint of Ecstasy.

Lay Health Committee

By MRS. MASON SMITH
The duty of the Sanitary district in Lake county was explained by Mrs. V. Wm. Briddle at a meeting of the lay health committee of the League of Women Voters, held April 2, at 290 Marshman road in Highland Park.
Mrs. Briddle informed the committee that the Sanitary district stretches from the Cook county line north to the Wisconsin State line, and inland for a distance of 2½ to 3 miles. It therefore covers the lake front but does not service the western sections of the county.

The district is governed by a board of five men appointed by the Lake county judge. The only purpose of the Sanitary district is to provide proper sewage disposal for the area. Each municipality must deliver its sewage to the plants, of which there are 12 in operation, the largest being in Waukegan. The municipalities must build and repair the sewers.
Those sections, as in some western parts of Highland Park, where sewers are not installed, are not serviced by the Sanitary district. Information regarding sewage disposal in these sections will be given at a later meeting.

The state, under the division of sanitary engineering, of the State Department of Public Health, must, according to law, supervise plans for construction of all public sewage disposal plants. It also invites all builders of septic tanks to get advice concerning their proper construction.
Sanitarian, Mr. Philbin, at Dist. No. 2, Woodstock, was recently invited to inspect a septic tank at a rural school in our health district, because 36 of the 38 children in attendance were ill with an intestinal infection. He found that the school sewage, instead of finding its way to the septic tank, was leaking directly into the school water supply.

Information regarding this service can be secured by addressing the State Board of Health, Division of Sanitary Engineering, Springfield, or your own district health office at Woodstock.
Mrs. Clarence Balke, of the county board of supervisors, explained the Mosquito Abatement district. This district is also governed by a board appointed by the county judge. About $8,900 is appropriated annually by the board for its operations, which begin with the first warm weather and continue throughout the summer. The work is a temporary expedient and consists of an oiling process used in mosquito breeding places. Very little can be spent under the present budget for drainage, which when undertaken on a more ambitious scale, will yield a longer time control.

Mrs. Balke's talk on the county hospital will be given at the meeting in the fall.
There will be no other meeting of the committee during April. The trip to inspect the sanitary disposal plant has been postponed until further announcement.
The next meeting will be on May 14 at 1:15, at 290 Marshman road, Highland Park.
