Fire Drills In the Home

Fires in the home often produce tragedies, with loss of life or disability and untold damage to property. That is due to carelessness, some of which is unavoidable and cannot be anticipated.
We do not know that our turn may be next and it is important that we prepare, by educating ourselves and families in fire prevention. All the insurance we can buy does not protect the lives of our loved ones.
Most of us fear fires but are attracted by them. This explains why one can stare for hours at a time at the fire in the fireplace or campfire.

This widespread fascination starts in childhood. Until the child has been burned or has learned to fear fires, its dangers, parents should always be on the lookout not only for his safety but their own. Tots learn quickly to strike matches, with more men and women smoking, junior develops a false sense of security in trying to mimic daddy and mommie. Too many households have matches lying around everywhere as a temptation. Matches should be kept out of the sight and reach of children.

What we need is training in the prevention and control instead of "I'll spank you if you start one," or "you'll get burned." We all insist upon fire drills in schools, but we forget our homes. Let's impress on our children how serious this situation is. A lecture on what to do, and how, when the time comes, is a must.

We could have a fire drill in our home with all the family present.
Each should be taught to use extinguishers at hand and to call the fire department first. The drill should also include how to crawl through a smoke-filled room, find doors and windows as a means of exit.

From this instruction the parents will gain valuable knowledge.
They might find that they are living in firetraps. They might find the chimney has a crack in it or the heating system in need of repair. Last, but not least, let's not forget the electrical system, the cords of all appliances, overloading of circuits, etc. These are a few of the hazards found in many homes.

It has been said that a clean housekeeper seldom has a fire, so discard all rubbish in attics, basements and closets. This refers to papers and rags which may be oily or paint-stained.

It is better to take such steps in quiet and calm instead of waiting until quick judgment is required in case flames block this or that exit. Even the calling for help from neighbors or the fire department may need reviewing.
How many know how to properly turn in an alarm for fire? Our city has not fire alarm boxes. Your telephone, or your neighbor's will bring the firemen. To give a fire alarm, keep cool, tell the operator you wish to report a fire. She will give you the fire department. Give the firemen your house number, street, nearest cross street. We have many streets that sound much alike, so we must have all the information before we can answer a call for fire.

These precautions will minimize the risk and avert many catastro-phies. By preparing and knowing how to act, lives can be saved.
WILLIAM J. HENNIG,
Fire Marshal.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

SUMMER READING IN THE CHILDREN'S ROOM

"Books are keys to wisdom's treasure,
Books are gates to land of pleasure.
Books are paths that upward lead, Books are friends, come let us read."
—Poulson

The children's room of the public library is a busy place these days, with the summer reading in full swing.

The theme of the year is "Around the World with Books." The light yellow leaflet, which is given each child upon registration, shows a map of the Americas, surrounded by boats, ships and airplanes, coming and going to and from our shores. Each one represents a book.

The boys and girls may read whatever they want, and whatever they need, the whole collection is at their disposal.

When a book is read, it is discussed with the librarian, then recorded on the leaflet, and one of the boats, ships or airplanes colored with crayon.

If a child has read and discussed seven books during the summer, he will be given a blue star; if he has twelve books on his leaflet, he is awarded a gold star, at our graduation exercises in the fall.

All children who are able to read are welcome to take part in the summer reading, and may register any time during vacation.
During vacation the children's room will be open from:
9 to 12.
1 to 6 Monday through Friday.
9 to 6 Saturday.

Prejudice." Other highlights of the graduation ceremonies included the senior commencement dance and the traditional Junior Ivy fete, when a junior student was crowned queen to preside at next year's fete.
