Formulae

We meet,—we speak,—we smile;
And after while
We kiss,—we quarrel and part;
One often-broken heart
Is left to tell the ragged tale
Of love that suddenly went stale.

Grumpy Was An Angry Man

A recent radio fun program required a man and his wife to swap jobs for a week and report results at the end of that time. Wife returned to report good business gains, and, among other incidents, a night out with "the boys." Hubby didn't have much to say. Which reminded me of the story of Old Grumpy.

In the high and far-off days of "way back when," my grandpa used to cross his knees. I would perch myself on the uppermost toe, take a firm grip on both his hands, and away we would jog to the tune of "Grumpy." It started like this:

"Grumpy was an angry man, an angry man was he—; Thought he could do more work in a day Than his wife could do in three—e;"

The inference was that finally Mrs. Grumpy got pretty fed up with hearing her hubby blow off, so she up and offered to change jobs with him for a day. He would do the multifarious tasks about the farm house, including milking the "mooley cow," while she would "go follow the plow."

"Done!" grunted Grumpy, with a nasty gleam in his eye. But when Mrs. G. had taken the team and started for the field, the Grumpy gleam faded. Chores about the house just didn't break right for Grumpy. The worst experience was with the "mooley cow," who must have been a most ornery critter, or else she didn't like men. As the story runs, "The cow she kicked and the cow she jumped, till the blood ran down to his toes."

Another casualty occurred when the Grumpy noggin' connected with a very solid beam. There is no polite reference in the song to a concussion or a fractured skull. No, it just states artlessly and graphically that "it made the brains to fly."

Well, at the day's end, Grumpy was a mess, and no foolin'. And so was the house. A very subdued and chastened Grumpy met his wife at the door and admitted, ruefully, that she could do more work in a day than he could do in three! Now, my childish imagination found nothing wrong with this outcome. But, examined with a more mature eye, the picture appears to be somewhat out of focus. One swallow doesn't make a summer, and one experience doesn't change the pattern of a lifetime.

A more logical conclusion would have been for Grumpy to meet his wife at the door that night, lowering like a thunder cloud, and roar, even while wincing with pain: "House work! Call that work? Huh! Child's play—that's what it is. But I s'pose you've fouled up a whole week for me. Yep!" squinting out at the careful furrows Mrs. G. had laboriously turned up to the sun, "Just as I think! Wimmin! Wimmin drivers! Gosh-a-mighty! Woman, where's my dinner?" Or words to that effect.

And poor Mrs. Grumpy, put entirely on the defensive, would creep meekly into the house to cook up the best meal she knew how in order to appease the wrath of her irate lord.

King Sol's Duties

When King Sol comes up in the morning
Spreading banners in pageant display,
He wakens Mankind in the dawning
To the birth of another new day.

When King Sol in the evening twilight,
Gathering up his gorgeous array,
Gives way to dusk of the young night,
He starts making To-morrow
To-day.

ROCCO FIORE TAKES A BRIDE

Huge baskets of white flowers decorated St. Joseph's church in Libertyville, on Saturday morning, June 29, at 9:30 o'clock, when Miss Rose De Grazia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prospero De Grazia of Rondout, and Rocco Fiore, son of Vito Fiore of Prairie avenue, were united in marriage.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin dress with a long train. Her veil was floor length, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

The bride's attendants were dressed in white marquisette. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of red and white roses, while the bridesmaids' bouquets were of pink carnations. Miss Mary Lomoro of Highwood, a niece of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mildred Grazia, sister of the bride, Miss Joanne Fiore, niece of the bridegroom, Miss Helen Cervac and Miss Virginia Parrino.

Dressed in pink and carrying colonial bouquets, Camille Fiore, also a niece of the bridegroom, and Angelina De Grazia, sister of the bride, acted as flower girls.

The best man was Frank De Grazia, brother of the bride, and Dominic Guido, Robert Fiore, Frank Caringello and Vincent Donato ushered.

The bride's mother wore black with a corsage of red roses. A breakfast for the bridal party and the immediate families was held at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony.

A reception was held in the evening at Labor temple. Over 300 attended.

After a week's honeymoon at Lake Geneva the young couple will live in Rondout.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Respect The Boys Of The White Cane Brigade

Have you some time seen a man carrying a white cane and wondered what it means?

It means that the person carrying the cane has poor or no eyesight and as such needs our assistance and understanding. Many boys coming out of service will soon be seen on the streets with white canes so whenever you see a "white cane boy," help him across the street; help him get on or off buses and trains and render any assistance you can in traffic.
