Beauty Is Where You Find It

Her vanity was mirrored in her hands, Meticulously groomed, each finger tipped By oval, crimson disc — far, far too long. I thought, how can she bear their sharp click, click On every object that she has to touch? What feline slant they lend to otherwise Appealing loveliness. I seemed to see The ugly livid grooves those nails could make Upon soft, shrinking flesh. I gave a thought To those benighted days when Chinese babes Were bound and maimed of foot, in weird belief That tiny, tortured stumps were beautiful. Don't get me wrong — I love to see a nicely tended hand . . . But cannot beauty still be practical? —HIGHLAND LASSIE.

Rules and Etiquette

Alas and alas For the side of me That burns but never glows; For I must smother inside of me The flame before it grows. So the aim of the world Is an aim of mine, Though I would rather go The stormy lane of winter skies With the wildest winds that blow. —W. O. THOMPSON.

Marjorie Ellen Volwiler Becomes an August Bride

On Saturday afternoon, August 24, at the Presbyterian church, before an altar flanked by fern and decorated with candelabra and large baskets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums, Marjorie Ellen Volwiler, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Volwiler, 2742 Deere Park, was united in marriage to Joseph Fox Grinnell, son of the Robert L. Grinnells of Winnetka. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in trailing white faille with long veil. Her bouquet of white was centered by white orchids, and for "something old" she wore a 75-year-old collar of rosepoint lace, brought back from Europe by her father on a recent trip. In the absence of Dr. Sherwin, the wedding vows were read by Chaplain William G. Doxsey, USN, of Great Lakes, whose white uniform carried out the general color scheme. Attending the bride as matron of honor, was her sister, Doris Volwiler Law, whose gown of white satin was relieved by a halo hat of dark green. The bridesmaids were the Misses Dorothy Wright, Patricia McGowan, Fern Heartel and Molly Grinnell Gordon, sister of the bridegroom. Pale green halo hats and bouquets of brilliant foliage with yellow roses, formed a pleasing contrast to their gowns of white. Harry Canmann, of Chicago, served as best man, and the ushers were John Loomis, of Winnetka, Thomas R. Mason of Muncie, Ind., Wallace Volwiler, brother of the bride, and Kermit Gordon, of Washington, D.C. The bride's mother wore a costume of gray, and Mrs. Grinnell was gowned in blue. Both wore

"Use 'Shall' for Futurity"

I shall maintain my calm, though you be far away from me, Your image, when I shut my eyes, I still shall see; And I shall know a measure more of calm content Than that I felt when you were near before you went. I dream of you these nights as you should really be, The you of whom I dream loves no one else but me; And, too, I know a respite from your smiling grace— Perhaps, in years to come, I "shall" forget your face. —A.C.C.

corsages of dark red orchids. A reception for over 300 guests at Exmoor Country club followed the ceremony. The club was tastefully decorated for the occasion with long streamers of ivy and bouquets of white flowers. After a brief honeymoon at Portage Point, Mich., the young couple will make their home at 1236 Asbury avenue, Winnetka.

Three Hutchison Brothers Now Out of Service

Lewis Hutchison, who was separated recently from the navy with the rank of lieutenant (jg) now plans to return to De Pauw university to complete his course which was interrupted by the war in his senior year. He returned recently from Shanghai, China, where he had spent four months. Prior to that time, he saw nine months of service in the Pacific aboard an LCS. His brother, Robert, who entered service in 1942, was separated from service with the rank of lieutenant commander. Bill, the youngest brother, who attended a navy school, is now also a civilian. The boys are the nephews of Dr. and Mrs. Grover Q. Grady.
