Former Highland Parker, L. B. Southerland, Dies
He had left Miami Beach three weeks ago with his family for a month's vacation after retiring from the real estate division of the United States Army Engineers at the Beach.

A native of North Carolina, he came here around 1920 and was prominent in civic affairs. He lived at 9216 Collins avenue, Surfside.

Surviving besides the daughter are his wife, Mrs. Ida Southerland, another daughter, Mrs. Edwin Cunningham, Norfolk, Va.; five sons: Thomas J., Miami; Charles C., Miami Beach; Julien, Annapolis, Md.; William S., New York City, and L. B. Jr., Haiti, and two brothers, Julien, Miami Beach, and Leon, Montgomery, Ala.

Requiem mass was intoned at St. Patrick's Catholic church, Miami. Burial was made in Woodlawn park.

Illinois U. Stresses Care of Children's Teeth

The University of Illinois will pioneer in dental education this fall with the establishment of a complete graduate course in pedodontics (dentistry for children).

The need for such a specialty has been apparent for a number of years, states Dr. Maurey Massler, supervisor of the course, because the dental care of children has been at such a low ratio.

"One out of every five adults who need dental attention gets it, whereas only one out of approximately twenty-five children who experience teeth difficulties is treated," he pointed out.

An orthodontist is essentially a treatment specialist. A pedodontist will primarily practice prevention. Every preventive care will go far toward eliminating gum disease, caries (decay) enlarged tonsils (from mouth breathing), and various facial deformities in adults whose teeth were neglected in childhood.

"Baby teeth must be preserved and taken care of," Dr. Massler warned, "first, to eat with, and second, to allow permanent teeth to come in correctly. The best early treatment is the practice of prevention."

PUBLIC LIBRARY

While Time Remains, by Leland Stowe.

With all the insight and humanity that distinguished his previous books, Leland Stowe has now given us a challenging picture of the present world. Responsibility for the political and social problems produced by the war rest, in part, on the United States, as Mr. Stowe makes clear. The book opens with an inventory of the present situation. It continues with an examination of the new Soviet power, present tendencies in western Europe, and developments and prospects in Asia.

Wind in the Olive Trees, by Abel Pienn.

What is happening in Spain is one of our great dramas of history. It has been concealed from us by censorship and violent propaganda. Wind in the Olive Trees lifts the curtain and enables us to see clearly the intense struggle of the Spanish people for their freedom against the forces that oppress them.

Caribbean Sea of the New World, by German Arciniegas.

A history of the Caribbean is inevitably a rich, colorful, bloody tale of the clashing of empires and the merging of cultures. More than four centuries of exploration, struggle and accomplishment have given Arciniegas one of the most complex and colorful of subjects.

The Epic of Latin America, by John A. Crow.

The Epic of Latin America fills the need for an authoritative book which deals with Latin America as a whole and provides a basic and continuous interpretation of its culture. It is a complete history of the origin and progress of Latin American civilization and of the great currents of Latin American life from the time of the Mayas to the present day.

Adventures of the Mind, by Arturo Castiglioni.

This distinguished historian of medicine has also been a serious and lifelong student of magic, incantation, superstition, mass suggestion, and all the other phenomena associated with man's attempt to control nature and his fellows by non-rational methods. This book is the product of this study, tracing the history of magic and suggestion from primitive man to the present day.

A Treasury of Doctor Stories, edited by N. D. Fabricant.

Here is an entirely new departure in anthologies—a collection of stories about doctors, nurses, and patients by some of the world's leading writers. A surprising number of the literary great of all countries have at one time or another written about the medical scene.

Ecuador Calls for Settlers to Occupy Free Productive Land

Perhaps some of our readers have arrived at the conclusion that they may as well turn the country over to the Democrats and tie themselves to the far horizons where they may sit under their own vine and fig tree and contemplate the idiosyncrasies of homo sapiens and the world in general. If so, the following release from the Republica Ecuador may be worth perusal.

The Department of Public Lands and Colonization of the Ministry of Economy of the Government of Ecuador, South America, announces that 125,000 acres of rich and potentially productive, but unclaimed land in the Santo Domingo de los Colorados area of Ecuador, is now available to North American and British settlers. Each adult settler may obtain 50 hectares or approximately 124 acres of this land, free, except for modest commissioner-transfer charges, to approved applicants.

This land concession is authorized by presidential decree and contracted by the Government Department of Public Lands and Colonization, the Minister of Economy and the Minister of Public Works, Dr. J. M. Sheppard (American) and Prof. Arturo Montasinos (Ecuadorian) are appointed as Government Intermediaries to publicize, distribute and allot this land to satisfactory North American and British citizens.

Elevation of land is over 600 feet. Average temperature from 72 to 88 degrees F. Location: less than 125 miles from Quito, capital city, with road connections to and, or adjoining an all-weather highway now linked with Quito, soon to be linked in the opposite direction, with Esmeraldas on the Pacific coast. Ample rainfall and excellent virgin soil, testing equal to that of Java, long recognized as the best or near-best on earth.

Stands of top-grade tropical timber are to be found upon the land. As the concession is close to rivers and interspersed with streams, an abundance of water power is available. A recently constructed hospital is located in the nearby town of Santo Domingo de los Colorados which also has daily mail service, telegraphic connections and police protection.

Settlers will be allowed to bring in all personal effects and agricultural implements free of customs duty charges.

Ecuador, with but three million inhabitants, needs and invites colonization by pioneer-minded, ambitious agriculturally inclined men and women of good character and responsibility.

Interested parties may obtain soil and health report, map of Ecuador and this land concession, list of tropical fruits, vegetables and paying crops recommended for the area and application blank for land reservation, without charge or obligation, by addressing Dr. J. M. Sheppard, Co-Intermediary, Casilla 315, Quito, Ecuador, So. America.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

Four new novels recently added to the fiction collection of the library are of interest. "The Sudden Guest" is the first full length novel that Christopher LaFarge has written. The background is centered around the Rhode Island hurricanes of 1938 and 1944. The principal character is highly egocentric and the story demonstrates that the egocentric person creates his own hell during his lifetime—that he who lives to himself ends in living by himself.

"Quality" by Cid R. Sumner, is the story of "Pinkey" Johnson, a young Negro girl. She has been educated in the North and has graduated from nurses' training—one of the outstanding members of her class. Her return to the little Mississippi town of her childhood and the problems she faces there are the theme of the book. The author handles the race question with a broader and more sympathetic understanding of the problems involved both from the Negro and white viewpoint than is usually the case.

"Yellow Tapers for Paris" is the most recent book by Bruce Marshall, author of "The World, the Flesh, and Father Smith." It is a story of Paris just before the fall of the city. The characters are of the "petit bourgeois." The book is largely an indictment of the sloth of man—his failure to face issues, to take purposeful action. It shows that victory and defeat come as much from the deeds of the citizen as from the dictates of the leader.

In "The Dark Wood," Christine Weston tells the story of two people who have been confronted with personal tragedy. One has refused to face life—has gone to pieces physically and emotionally. The other has resorted to a routine of solitary drinking in various restaurants. The story is concerned with the rebuilding of their lives.

Curtis Bok gives the following description in the preface of his new book, "I, Too, Nicodemus." "What follows is intended to be neither a novel nor a collection of court stories. It falls, I hope, between the two and is rather a bit of legal weather, a cross-section of the array of situations that trial judge meets in his work and must solve somehow."

Two new collections of stories have been placed on the shelves. "The Field and Stream Reader" is a collection of outdoor stories by contributors to that magazine from its beginning to the present. "Adventures in Time and Space" is an anthology of modern science-fiction stories of the future world of atomic power, rockets, robots and time and space machines. These stories are an exciting and sometimes frightening extension of the test-tube of today into the superman's world of tomorrow.

The copies of "Herodotus" ordered for those taking the Great Books course have arrived and are now for sale at the library.
