Brief Report of Lecture On Christian Science Delivered October 11

A lecture on Christian Science entitled "The Call of Christian Science," by Lt. Col. Robert E. Key, C. S. B., a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., was delivered at Elm Place auditorium last Friday, Oct. 11. The lecture spoke substantially as follows:

Tired of the husks of materialism, humanity is striving to find God. Many ask, Is there a God? Where can we find Him? What is His nature, and what is His purpose for man? Is there a Christ, a Saviour, and what is the meaning of life? Christian Science answers these questions thus: Yes, there is a God and you can find Him. There is a Christ, a Saviour, and you can know him. There is a solution to the world's problems, and there is a vital meaning to life.

When God is understood, a new idea of life is gained, a new hope established, a new view of man and the universe revealed. In the words of St. Paul, "behold all things are become new." (II Cor. 5: 17).

Christ Jesus
Christian Scientists regard Christ Jesus as their Wayshower. They revere him, and obey his instructions, but they do not believe that Jesus was God. They accept him as a Son of God. Jesus was a human man animated by the Christ, his divine nature. The title for our Master most favoured by Christian Scientists, is Jesus the Christ, or Christ Jesus. Jesus was the human man, Christ the divine ideal. The definition of the word "Christ" as given in the Christian Science textbook reads as follows: "CHRIST. The divine manifestation of God, which comes to the flesh to destroy incarnate error." (S. & H. 583). It will thus be seen that it was through the Christ that Jesus did his marvelous works. He claimed his inseparability from the Christ, and he is therefore known to us as Christ Jesus. The inseparability, but distinction, of Jesus and the Christ, is an important point in the theology of Christian Science. It does not imply that man is God, or that Christ is God, but rather that man is inseparable from God and His Christ, or manifestation.

Mary Baker Eddy
Mary Baker Eddy discovered Christian Science near Lynn, Massachusetts, in February, 1866. Owing to the effects of a serious accident, her life was despaired of by her physician. On the third day afterwards she opened her Bible at the Ninth chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, and read the account of the healing of the palsied man. The Scriptural narrative was illumined. Her thought was flooded with spiritual power. God revealed Himself to her—she was healed.

Christian Scientists owe Mrs. Eddy a profound debt of gratitude. They revere her as the Discoverer and Founder of a religion which has healed and satisfied them. Christian Science proclaims a full salvation from sin, sickness and death. All types of sin and disease yield to it. However, Mrs. Eddy reminds us, "The emphatic purpose of Christian Science is the healing of sin." (Rudimental Divine Science, p. 2:25-27). Christ Jesus did not recommend the sinner to go for healing to the priest, or send the sick man to a medical practitioner. To him theology and medicine were one, and they remain one in Christian Science.
