How would you answer this

We asked a lot of folks recently how much they thought the telephone company was making in the way of earnings. The answers were surprising—and pretty far off, too.

For the most part, people thought that because there are more telephones in service and more people using them more often, our earnings must be high.

Actually, Illinois Bell's earnings were at a lower rate during the war than at any point in history except two depression years. And this year they're dropping still lower.

For one thing, our wage costs have more than doubled since 1940! And everyone knows how costs of materials have gone up. So today more cents out of every telephone dollar must go into wages, supplies and equipment to give you the kind of telephone service you want.

In short, our income has gone up; our outgo has gone up still more; our rate of earnings has gone down.
